300 FELONS RIOT FOR SUGAR

BUSINESS GIVES U.S. POINTERS ON CUTTING BUDGET

Calls for Slash of Half a Billion.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—A demand for the retirement of a federal government from its paternalistic activities, for the reorganization of the executive branch and for the immediate curtailment of federal expenditures to the extent of 500 millions of dollars a year was voiced today by the special committee of the chamber of commerce of the United States which has just concluded a survey of government finances.

MATTHEW S. SLOAN.

The committee found that, outside of the service of the debt, trust funds and other fixed charges, there are expenditures of two billions a year which may be radically reduced without impairing the efficiency of the government or otherwise affecting it except to withdraw it from activities originally conceived to pertain to the states alone.

Shows Where Cuts Are Needed.

The committee pointed out more than a score of large expenditures the immediate reduction of which would help to balance the budget. Among them are those for federal aid grants to the states, military pensions and veterans' benefits, national defense, the departments of agriculture, commerce and labor, the postal deficit, the federal farm board and the 42 independent establishments.

"The government spent its way into a deficit; it can emerge only by economy and sound fiscal methods," commented Matthew S. Sloan of New York, chairman of the committee which made the survey. "Even in prosperous times these expenditures were growing much more rapidly than the national income. In a period of depression the weight of these expenditures is greatly increased. It is the duty of governments to make the adjustment required of individuals and corporations. The half billion dollars of annual increase in public expenditures which has occurred during recent years must be eliminated."

Mr. Sloan said that as an earnest of its attitude the chamber "is through asking the federal government to spend more money for anything not of the gravest emergency nature."

Must Eliminate Much.

He went on to say that it would not be sufficient for congress merely to trim appropriations for the present activities of the federal government. The emergency requires congress "to suspend or discontinue" many activities and functions that have been written into law.

"High taxes," said Mr. Sloan, "are made necessary by large expenditures. Governmental expenditures in the United States are now estimated to be between 13 and 14 billion dollars annually. Per capita expenditures, compared with the pre-war year of 1913, have increased about 360 per cent for the federal government, 285 per cent for the states, and 200 per cent for local units."

The committee proposes a reorganization of the administrative branch of the government which will eliminate as far as practicable the 42 commissions and other independent establishments the cost of which exceeds 1,300 millions of dollars a year. A more efficient organization, the committee holds, would merge these bodies in the departments.

Activities Need Coördinating.

"It is known," says the committee report, "that there are duplications and some functions are scattered through various units. If the same or similar activities could be brought together in one unit there would be opportunity for greater systemization with resulting economies. Public construction items, for example, are found in the budgets of a large number of spending units. Government activties relating to maritime affairs are now divided among the navy department, the shipping board, the fleet corporation, and several bureaus of the department of commerce. Centralization of these activities would not only afford opportunity for greater efficiency but would also be a great

35 CHINESE DIE IN BLAST; PANIC GRIPS SHANGHAI

Explosives Blow Up; City Is Shaken.

BULLETIN.

NANKING, Jan. 25.—(Monday.)—(AP)—Eugene Chen, Chinese foreign minister, resigned today when the government rejected his proposals for what was understood to be a "drastic" policy toward Japan, including severance of diplomatic relations. The government was understood to be formulating a milder policy. Eugene Chen became China's foreign minister, succeeding Dr. Wellington Koo, when the present cabinet went into office Dec. 28, following the resignation of the government of Chiang Kai-shek. It was understood a notice of radical change in instructions would be cabled to W. W. Yen, Chinese spokesman at the league of nations today, outlining a more moderate policy.

BULLETIN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Jan. 25 (Monday).—Japan and Great Britain are expected to take a stronger policy toward China as a result of a reported agreement whereby Great Britain pledges not to block Japan's actions in Manchuria and Japan promises to respect Britain's actions in the Yangtze valley. The United States was not asked to participate in the agreement.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 24.—Shanghai, under high tension due to fear of seizure by the Japanese, was thrown into a panic this afternoon by a terrific explosion which rocked the city, shattering windows for a distance of a mile and a half, including portions of the international settlement and the French concession.

Thirty-five Chinese were killed when two lighters loaded with 100 cases of high explosives blew up in midstream when being towed across the river by a tug, a spark from which ignited the canvas covering.

The lighters were bound for the Lunghwa arsenal when the explosion occurred, sending a column of dense smoke 500 feet high.

Blast Starts Panic.

This terrific detonation occurred when an airplane from Nanking was flying over Lunghwa, and the tense Sino-Japanese situation convinced thousands that the Japanese had begun an aerial bombardment of the arsenal. Terror stricken mobs began surging from the Chinese city into the foreign controlled areas.

Less than two hours before the explosion Dr. Albert Porges, Shanghai manager of the American Express company, was shot and killed by Chinese soldiers on sentry duty guarding the highway approach to the Lunghwa arsenal.

Fire Through Back of Car.

Mr. Porges, who is an Austrian citizen and was lately ordered to transfer to the company's New York office, was motoring with a young woman friend in his car when signaled to stop by the sentries. The Chinese chauffeur jammed on his brakes, but the slowing automobile skidded past the sentries, who fired through the back of the car, a rifle bullet penetrating Porges' right shoulder blade and emerging through his right lung. He died from loss of blood before reaching a hospital.

Early tonight incendiaries attempted to burn the Shanghai home of Baron Mamoru Shigemitsu, Japan's minister to China, who is now in Tokio, but the blaze was controlled after it had destroyed the garage and damaged the house but little.

The arrival here at noon today of the aircraft carrier Notobe with seven planes brought the total of the Japanese naval craft in the Shanghai harbor to 10. Twenty-two additional warships lie at Sasebo ready to rush to Shanghai at a moment's notice if the Chinese, the mayor of Shanghai or the Nanking government refuse to comply with Japan's demand to call off the anti-Japanese boycott and anti-Japanese agitation propaganda.

Japanese Priest Dies.

This morning one Japanese priest, who was one of the five badly beaten last Monday by a Chinese mob, died at a hospital here. There will be a public funeral tomorrow which it is feared may occasion renewed demonstrations.

Tonight 1,400 Japanese marines are ashore in Shanghai; all Japanese war-

The thousands of west siders in the far Austin residential district who were thrilled late last night by a brilliant light which illuminated their homes, their roofs, and the streets, and who saw a slowly descending flare, suspended from a parachute, are entitled to the following explanation:

LEE SMITH.

Lee Smith, 24 years old, of Minneapolis, air mail pilot for the Northwest Airways, Inc., was compelled to make a forced landing in Columbus park because of motor trouble, and to do so he threw out the parachute flare which lighted the ground.

Wild Reports Get About.

First reports from excited witnesses bombarded police and newspaper offices about 11 o'clock. One witness said he saw two aviators dropping with parachutes. Another, with a more elaborate vision, increased the parachute jumpers to three, while several others described the flare as meteors. The aviators landed in West Monroe street, according to one account.

Police squads rushed to various sections of the far west side, but found no parachute jumpers. Frank Eminger, 169 Leclaire avenue, did, however, find the burned-out parachute flare nestling in a tree in front of 150 North Kilpatrick avenue.

Meanwhile, Pilot Smith, calmly smoking a cigaret, was standing beside his uninjured plane on the seventh fairway of the snow covered golf course in Columbus park, one block north of Harrison street and an equal distance east of Austin boulevard.

"Just a burned out bearing," he explained simply. "I didn't want to land on a house, so I dropped a flare and saw this place."

Pilot Tells About It.

Smith, who lives at 4840 South 12th street, Minneapolis, took off from the Twin Cities shortly after 7 o'clock last night in a taper wing Waco biplane, equipped with a nine cylinder Wright radial motor and open cockpit. He carried 600 pounds of mail. He stopped at Milwaukee for additional mail, and started for the Chicago airport against head winds.

He was flying at 500 feet when the motor missed. Added power failed to correct the trouble and experience told him, he said later, that a bearing had burned out. He was only five minutes from the Chicago airport, but because of lack of height he did not try to make it. Instead he dropped the flare, maneuvered around to the snow covered golf field and made a perfect landing. West Park police finally arrived and guarded his ship while a truck transferred his mail to the airport.

RUN GREYHOUNDS ON GOLF COURSE; KILL 12 RABBITS

A group of greyhound owners and their friends converted the golf course of the Ridge Country club, 106th street and California avenue, into an impromptu dog track yesterday, with live rabbits as the quarry.

Twelve rabbits were killed by the fleet hounds. Part of the rabbit chase, which was held to keep the greyhounds in condition for track work, was witnessed by a Morgan Park police squad.

Edward De Young, club watchman, said he tried to keep the men off the golf course, but was ignored. De Young said the Morgan Park police squad which witnessed part of the chase, was riding in squad car No. 174. De Young summoned the club president, James Fryer, and the latter filed a protest with police against the invasion of the club grounds by the greyhound owners.

Billion Drop in Payments of U.S. Taxes

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—The effect of the economic depression on the taxable income of the United States was demonstrated today in figures issued by the internal revenue bureau which showed a drop of more than one billion dollars in internal revenue receipts for the calendar year 1931.

The major portion of the billion dollar decline occurred in income tax receipts, according to the figures, revenue from this source decreasing from $2,332,968,393 in 1930, to $1,368,035,467 in 1931. Receipts from miscellaneous taxes in 1931 amounted to $546,019,155, as compared with $599,997,666 in 1930.

Comparative Figures Given.

Of the total income tax receipts, the bureau stated, corporations paid $800,803,537 in 1931, as compared with $1,242,595,782 in 1930, while income taxes collected from individuals dropped from $1,090,372,611 in 1930 to $567,226,929 in 1931.

Total internal revenue receipts in Illinois for 1931 amounted to $141,983,222, dropping from $235,944,841 in 1930. Of the 1931 receipts income taxes amounted to $125,685,219, as compared with $214,639,909 in the previous year, while miscellaneous taxes totaled $16,297,002, as compared with the 1930 collections of $21,304,931.

Figures for Middle West.

Internal revenue receipts for Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, and Wisconsin divided as to miscellaneous and income tax collections were as follows in 1931:

Indiana, $14,426,227 income, $2,156,095 miscellaneous; Iowa, $8,309,849 income, $348,898 miscellaneous; Michigan, $67,249,142 income, $5,538,292 miscellaneous; Wisconsin, $20,935,165 income, $1,658,014 miscellaneous.

Hope to Reach Accord Today on Rail Wages

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

Railway labor will deliberate today on whether to accept a 10 per cent wage cut, and there were some hopes expressed last night that an agreement might be signed by tonight winding up the negotiations pending at the Palmer house between the rail unions and a committee of railroad presidents.

It was said that some hurried maneuvers would have to be put through today to finish the job so quickly, and some of the leaders felt that a forecast for a windup tomorrow would be safer. They also warned that an unforeseen slip might stall the parley even longer.

As to the date upon which an agreement to cut wages would go into effect, none has been fixed definitely, but it was considered most feasible that the reduction would begin with Feb. 1. The railroads pay twice monthly, on the first and fifteenth, and since the next pay period begins Feb. 1, it was presumed that date would be accepted.

"Big Four" to Take Lead.

Reports yesterday were that the "Big Four" brotherhoods—engineers, conductors, firemen and trainmen—will take the lead in influencing a decision. It was stated from several sources that the engineers and conductors in informal conferences yesterday had reached an understanding to approve the proposed wage reduction.

The firemen, headed by David B. Robertson, who is also chairman of the Railway Labor Executives' association, and the trainmen, headed by A. F. Whitney, had not yet determined their position, and will go into session today immediately after a brief session of the executives' association is held. It was forecast last night that both the firemen and the trainmen would approve the 10 per cent cut, and that with a united stand among the "Big Four," all of the other 17 brotherhoods would accept that program.

Hard Hit by Depression.

It was hinted that in the event the firemen and trainmen turned down the cut, the conductors and engineers would stand with them. The first two classes have been hardest hit in the depression, and it was reported that if they insisted on fighting against a cut their wishes might prevail.

However, it was reported that the employés' organizations have felt they must take a reduction, and that they would rather take it voluntarily for a limited period of one year than to risk going to arbitration and being forced to take a permanent reduction.

Railroads' Final Answer.

The committee of railroad presidents, headed by President Daniel Willard of the Baltimore and Ohio, spent yesterday preparing their "last stand" on the relief program presented by the unions. Last evening the presidents' ultimatum was delivered to Mr. Robertson, who said it would be read and discussed at a meeting of the labor executives at 9 o'clock this morning.

Unless the railroads' statement presents some new point requiring further discussion—and it was reported last night that it did not—the various brotherhoods will go into separate sessions during the morning and afternoon to debate their decisions. Some executives have full authority from their men to act independently.

Neither Mr. Willard nor Mr. Robertson would reveal the text of the statement submitted by the railroads yesterday, but it was reported that few changes from the original stand of the presidents had been made. In some cases the presidents withdrew qualifying phrases and made their offers more definite, it was said.

Job Stabilization Asked.

The employés had asked for stabilization of employment, a commission to study the six hour day, and made other proposals for relieving unemployment. It is understood the presidents will offer to stabilize employment by individual agreements between the various roads and the local union organizations. The union bid for a study of the six hour day has been turned down, but the unions have sought independent action by congress to force an inquiry.

If an accord is reached it is believed the drafting of a formal agreement will not require much time, since its terms will follow the language of the various proposals and counter proposals which have been made during the sessions of the conference.

Bottles Fall from Window; Pedestrian Struck on Head

Servea Vanderwerf, 41 years old, 10000 Perry avenue, was passing the Roosevelt hotel at 1152 South Wabash avenue last night when six bottles dropped from an upper window. One hit Vanderwerf on the head and he was taken to the county hospital, where a four inch scalp wound was stitched together. It was assumed by the police that the bottles contained beer which a resident of the hotel had put on a sill to cool.

BATTLE ALL DAY IN DARTMOOR, ENGLISH PRISON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DARTMOOR, Devon, England, Jan. 24.—Mutiny raged in Dartmoor penitentiary today. More than 300 enraged convicts waged an all day battle with guards and police in a futile effort to escape over the walls in the most violent penal outbreak in British history.

The rioting felons—angered because no sugar was served with a mess of porridge—burned the principal buildings. Ninety-five prisoners were wounded by gunshots or injured by batons in the hand-to-hand struggle. One policeman and one guard were injured by flying stones. Two convicts were understood to have been killed, but the home office in London denied the report.

Unrest in the penitentiary, which houses 500 of the most desperate criminals in the country, flared last week. The convicts protested the quality of their food. The murmurings grew and two minor demonstrations were curbed by guards last week.

Convicts Threaten Guards.

Yesterday the convicts threatened the guards but were quieted down without a clash. The mutiny broke out this morning when the inmates were marched into the prison yard on their way to church services.

First came an ominous murmuring. Suddenly the prisoners broke ranks and banded together. They screamed oaths at the guards when the latter ordered them back to their cells.

The prison chaplain, who stood in the entrance of one of the buildings, was unmolested by the shouting prisoners.

"Some of the prisoners complied with the order to return to their cells," the chaplain said after the riot had been quelled. "Suddenly stones began to fly and windows in the buildings were smashed. The guards had no other alternative but to retreat behind the gates and open fire on the rioters with buckshot.

Set Fire to Buildings.

"The prisoners stormed the offices of the administration buildings. In a moment smoke and flames were emerging from the windows. It was then that the police and soldiers were summoned."

With the guards retreating behind a screen of buckshot fire, the prisoners gained possession of most of the penitentiary. Many played band instruments during the pandemonium. One found a bugle and sounded a charge on it. Others ran about wildly singing "The Red Flag." The din was terrific.

The noise was heard in Prince Town, a few miles away. The residents saw the smoke roll from the penitentiary and became terror stricken. The male residents armed themselves with guns and the women hid behind locked doors.

Warden Flees for Life.

While S. N. Roberts, the prison governor, was phoning for police aid from Plymouth, Exeter, and other neighboring towns, prisoners broke through the office windows and dashed at him. He fled through a rear door, locking it behind him, and took refuge in a cell block inhabited by prisoners who had obeyed the order to return to their cells.

Just at the moment when it seemed the prisoners would win their battle, motor buses containing fifty Plymouth policemen sped up to the Dartmoor gates. Prison guards deployed about the walls, sniping at the mutineers as they attempted to scale them. The gates were swung open and the police charged the rioters, beating them with clubs.

By this time the flames had destroyed the administrative buildings.

Convicts Beaten to Ground.

Eyewitnesses of the riot declared that the scene inside the prison was ghastly. Blood was spattered all over the yard as the convicts were beaten to the ground right and left.

Col. Turner, the home office commissioner, who came to Dartmoor from London to investigate unrest among the inmates, almost lost his life trying to reason with the felons. The prisoners shouted him down and attacked him, but he was saved by an Irishman, a long termer, who fought the mob off until Turner got away.

Another prisoner saved a guard in the boiler house. He raked the ashes out of one of the boilers, thrust the guard inside, shut the door and met the attacking prisoners with his shovel.

Although the home office denied there were any fatalities, policemen declared that one convict fell with the blazing clock tower when it collapsed. Another was seen to plunge head first from the top of the 60 foot wall to a pile of stones below.

When the mutineers held up their hands in surrender, they were rounded up and led to their cells at the point of guns. Cells were searched for weapons and guards found kitchen knives, iron bars, scrap iron and nails tied up in handkerchiefs.

Prisoners participating in the mutiny face a flogging with a cat o' nine tails. They will be placed in irons.

THE "DARTMOOR MASSACRE."

Dartmoor prison was built 125 years ago in South Devon to house French prisoners of war. Originally it comprised a group of seven cell blocks with double walls fourteen feet high, on thirty dreary acres.

Many Americans suffered behind its sweating walls from 1812 to 1815. They were seamen, impressed by British cruisers, who had chosen confinment rather than fight their countrymen. They were subjected to harsh treatment from the military guard commanded by Capt. T. S. Shortland of the royal navy, the governor of the prison.

On April 6, 1815, after their hard biscuit ration had been reduced by Capt. Shortland's order, the seamen assembled in front of the prison storehouse and refused to return to their cells unless the rations were restored or soft bread substituted.

Fire on Americans.

Capt. Shortland ordered the guards to fire. When the smoke lifted six Americans were dead. The number wounded has been estimated at between 33 and 67, and the incident has been referred to as the "Dartmoor massacre."

Dartmoor became a convict prison in 1850. On Nov. 12, 1880, inmates rioted and one of the ringleaders was shot dead. During the world war Dartmoor was used for the incarceration of conscientious objectors. The prison is surrounded by bogs and morasses. While occasionally a prisoner gets outside the walls, he has never been known to make his way to safety. He either perishes from hunger and exposure or is recaptured.

Readers of the tales of Charles Dickens may recall his "Great Expectations," which opens with a graphic portrayal of the bleak region surrounding Dartmoor prison 100 years ago. In the story Pip, the chief character, is standing at his mother's grave when he is confronted by an escaped prisoner. At that moment a shot from the direction of the prison is heard, announcing the escape. Pip aids the felon, bringing him food, and even a file taken from the blacksmith husband of his own sister.

FACING ARREST AS GIRL SLAYER, ENDS OWN LIFE

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—David Shafer, alias George Wills, killed himself in his farm home near here tonight as Washtenaw county authorities arrived to arrest him as the murderer of Mrs. Josephine Hudson, divorcee, with whom he had been living.

The body of Mrs. Hudson, with a bullet hole behind the left ear, was found in a sedan near U. S. highway 112 in Dearborn, a suburb of Detroit, early yesterday. Identification was made by Ray Hudson, divorced husband of the woman, who saw her picture in a Detroit paper.

Mrs. Hudson was about 20 years old and the mother of two children. Shafer deserted a wife and six children to elope with Mrs. Hudson last July, according to Sheriff Jacob Andrews.

The couple had been living under the name of Mr. and Mrs. George Wills. The automobile in which Mrs. Hudson was killed bore Illinois license plates issued to George Wills.

FAMILY ROBBED; LOCKED UP.

Three armed men invaded the home of Morris Markowitz, 4001 Oakdale avenue, late Saturday night and after forcing him, his wife and a daughter, 4½ years old, into a closet fled with $300 and jewelry valued at $70. The robbers were admitted by the child when they rang the door bell.

PAUL WARBURG, NOTED IN WORLD BANKING, IS DEAD

Financier Succumbs to Pneumonia.

New York, Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Paul Moritz Warburg, chairman of the boards of the Manhattan company and the International Acceptance bank of New York, and member of a prominent family of bankers, died tonight at his home. He was 63 years old.

Mr. Warburg, who was a brother of Felix M. Warburg, had been ill since early last December, when overwork, the result of a strenuous summer spent in following the European crisis, brought on a stroke. Ten days ago hypostatic pneumonia developed, and in his rundown condition he was unable to fight off the disease.

As word of his death spread through the city, messages of condolence poured in from all sides. Mayor James J. Walker was among the first to telephone. Many well known men called personally at the house to extend their sympathy.

Conceives Reserve Plan.

Paul M. Warburg was among those who made banking reform possible in the United States. Coming to this country as a young man, he entered the American banking field with the idea of returning in a few years to Germany, where members of his family had been bankers for generations.

He quickly sensed the opportunities in America for service far above personal gain. After years of study he wrote books entitled "Defects and Needs of Our Banking System" and "A Plan for a Modified Central Bank." Finally, in 1910, he wrote a plan for a united reserve bank of the United States, many features of which are now embodied in the federal reserve system.

Born in Hamburg.

Born in Hamburg on Aug. 10, 1868, son of Moritz and Charlotte Oppenheim Warburg, he was educated in the schools of Hamburg. In 1886 he graduated from the Real gymnasium. His great grandfather had founded the banking house of Warburg & Warburg in that city. The bank, now known as M. M. Warburg & Co., has been conducted by members of the family ever since.

That he might learn every phase of the banking business, Mr. Warburg began his career with an exporting firm in Hamburg. Two years later he went to London to learn further of the financing of merchandise shipments. Subsequently he worked in Paris. After his return to Hamburg he was admitted in 1895 to partnership in the Warburg firm.

While on a trip around the world in 1893, Mr. Warburg visited New York, where he met Nina J. Loeb, daughter of the late Solomon Loeb of the New York banking house of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

In 1895 he married Miss Loeb. After they had lived in Hamburg for eight years, during which time Mr. Warburg made frequent trips to New York, he decided to stay here, and in 1902 became a member of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

In 1914 President Wilson asked Mr. Warburg to become a member of the federal reserve board. In 1921 Mr. Warburg again took up his work as a private banker, founding the International Acceptance Bank, Inc. His interest in the federal reserve system was not diminished, however, and from 1921 to 1926 he was a member of the advisory council of the federal reserve board, being president from 1924 to 1926.

Early in 1929, before the stock market crash, Mr. Warburg sharply criticized as "the present orgies of unrestrained speculation" the heavy trading on the New York stock exchange. He characterized the volume of trading as a "debauch," calling attention to the fact that the sharp increase in the prices of representative stocks was "quite unrelated to increases in plant, property, and earning power."

He made the charge that "stock market operators for many months governed the flow of money not only in the United States but in the principal marts of the world." He also declared that the federal reserve board, through its failure to check speculative credit, had relinquished its leadership in the money market to stock market operators.

Mr. Warburg had a son, James Paul Warburg, president of the International Manhattan Co,, Inc., and a daughter, Bettina. A brother, Felix M. Warburg, is a partner of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. His other brothers reside in Germany.

Quakes and Eruptions in Guatemala Destroy Town

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador, Jan. 24.—(AP)—The town of Acatenango in Guatemala was reported today to have been destroyed by the recent earthquakes and volcanic eruptions in that country. It was not learned if any persons were killed. Guatemalan volcanoes were still throwing off ashes and smoke today. Damage from the earthquakes and eruptions was especially heavy in the departments of Chimaltenango, Escuintla, Amatitlan and Zacatepequez, centers of coffee plantations.

PLANE WITH OIL BURNING ENGINE SOARS 23,000 FT.

Chamberlin Flies Diesel to a Record.

New York, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Clarence Chamberlin reached a height officially estimated at about 23,000 feet today in his first altitude attempt with an oil-motored plane.

Chamberlin took off at 3:30 p. m., watched by a large crowd at Floyd Bennett airport, and landed an hour and five minutes later. His altimeter showed a height of only 17,500 feet, but when John Heinmuller of the National Aeronautic association examined the barograph he said the height probably would be 23,000. The barograph will be sent to Washington for calibration.

Pleased with Results.

Chamberlin, who flew the Atlantic to Germany in 1927, was using a Lockheed plane, powered with a Diesel engine burning ordinary furnace oil.

In this "flying furnace," Chamberlin recently made flights from Jersey City, N. J., to Washington and return. On the return leg of his journey to the capital Chamberlin said he used only 70 cents worth of fuel oil.

When he reached a height of about 15,000 feet in his altitude attempt, he said, his altimeter became frozen. He began using oxygen from a small tank.

It was 10 below zero near the highest point and the wind was blowing at gale velocity. Although he was headed west the plane was buffeted northeastward over Queens. Chamberlin said he did not regain his bearings until he had started the descent.

Pleased ith Results.

Both Chamberlin and Heinmuller expressed themselves pleased with the results.

"I've never seen a better rate of climb in any altitude test," said Heinmuller.

There is no special classification in the American air record list for Diesel engine marks, but the National Aeronautic association, with which Chamberin communicated recently, said any records he made would be listed under miscellaneous performances.

With a little adjustment of propellers, so that they could be made to revolve more slowly, more height could be obtained, Chamberlin said.

The altitude record for all planes is more than 43,000 feet, he' by Apollo Soucek, navy flier.

JOWITT, STRONG MACDONALD MAN, LEAVES CABINET

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 24.—Sir William Jowitt has quit his post of attorney-general in the British cabinet, it was announced at 10 Downing street today. The resignation was expected because of Jowitt's failure to get a seat in parliament.

Sir William is one of the three Labor members of the cabinet who stood by Prime Minister MacDonald when the National government was formed. It was his second change in party affiliations in two years. He was elected to parliament as a Liberal in 1929, then resigned his seat and became a Laborite. He was appointed attorney-general after his reëlection.

He was defeated by a Conservative in the October general election in a contest for the combined English universities' seat. MacDonald was unable to induce the Conservative to give up his seat to Jowitt, thus forcing the latter to quit the cabinet.

Quincy, Ill., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Dr. Clyde L. Casey, the La Harpe physician who shot and killed Oliver Peck on the morning of Nov. 2, was denied a new trial by Judge A. Clay Williams yesterday and was ordered to serve his fourteen year sentence. The sheriff will take him to Joliet tomorrow.

MOTHER GREETS U. S. WIFE OF INDIAN PRINCE

VANCOUVER, B. C., Jan. 24.—(AP)—The former Nancy Ann Miller, now the wife of the former majarajah of Indore, wealthy Indian prince, arrived here today from the east en route to the home of her parents in Seattle. She was greeted by her mother, Mrs. Jennie L. Miller, and her sister, Miss Ruth Miller, whom she had not seen for nearly four and a half years.

The maharanee, with her mother, sister and attendants, will remain here until tomorrow while formalities with the immigration department are fulfilled. She is now a British subject. She took occasion to deny emphatically rumore of impending divorce from her Indian husband.

"My husband would have loved to have come with me on this trip," she said, "but we didn't feel that both of us could leave our little ones. I expect to spend two weeks in Seattle and then I'll rejoin my husband in Cairo. Our two daughters are with the prince."

Lynching Town Called 'Backward' in U. S. Report

New York, Jan. 24.—(AP)—In reporting on the lynching of a Negro at Salisbury, Md., last Dec. 4, Prof. Broadus Mitchell of the department of political economy, Johns Hopkins university, tonight described the town as "backward in its mental and spiritual development." The report was made public by the Federal Council of Church of Christ in America. The victim, Matthew Williams, a Negro, was hanged and burned after he shot and killed his employer. Prof. Mitchell asserted only two citizens attempted to stop the lynching and that the chief of police and the sheriff "offered no resistance."

SCHOOL BUDGET READY; KEEP IN FADS AND FRILLS

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The educational budget—with provision for continued instruction in tap dancing, beauty culture, and how to play "golf to music"—is scheduled, according to rumor, to be adopted next Wednesday at the regular school board session. Few of the so-called "fads and frills," except a docent and $1,200 worth of bus rides for art students—characterized by President Lewis E. Myers as "the most ridiculous item in the budget"—have been eliminated.

The hardships of the business depression are so distressing that President Myers announced yesterday he would urge the school board to lay off either the husband or wife where both are employed by the board of education. That recommendation he will present next Wednesday.

Calls Situation Critical.

"The situation is critical," said Mr. Myers. "Governmental costs are too high. The people cannot pay the amount of taxes levied."

However, Supt. Bogan has told principals of the schools that he might be justified in expecting more taxes for this year. Mr. Bogan's forecast is based upon the decision of County Judge Jarecki, which asserted that billions of personal property should be added to the tax rolls. The superintendent of schools anticipates there will be a reassessment for 1928 and 1929, which, he says, "may add a considerable amount of property to the tax rolls for those years, and this increase will carry over to the tax rolls of 1930 and 1931."

Revises Estimates Upward.

"Therefore," said Supt. Bogan to the principals, "it seems as though we might be justified in revising upward present estimates of revenues for all board of education funds for the year 1932.

"The penalty of underestimating the 1932 revenues would be a corresponding reduction in the tax levy, with the result that the schools would be unnecessarily deprived of essential services. It is to be remembered that a reduction in the budget means a proportionate reduction in the tax levy based upon it."

That Supt. Bogan holds the opinion that we might be justified in revising upward the tax revenue estimates of the board is important. He is the adviser of the trustees on the educational budget. His recommendations of what should and should not be trimmed to eliminate a prescribed amount from the budget have been accepted by the board.

Savage Backs Him Up.

Chairman Joseph R. Savage of the budget subcommittee acted favorably on each suggestion of the superintendent. When the superintendent advised against any more trimming, Trustee Savage said the reductions were over.

To the Savage subcommittee Supt. Bogan made a speech defending public school instruction in tap dancing. Others have defended the teaching of how to play "golf to music." They have explained that tap dancing and "golf to music" are substitutes for setting up exercises with wands or dumbbells.

Test Theory of Activity.

To ascertain the effectiveness of "golf to music" and tap dancing as substitutes for setting up exercises, two army officers were consulted, one of whom has had unusual experience in the physical training of recruits.

Both of them explained it would be indiscreet for them to criticize instruction in Chicago public schools, but both said that tap dancing and "golf to music" are a waste of money as a substitute for the setting up exercises.

"Why don't you go after the waste in the public schools," phoned in one teacher yesterday morning. "I know there is one elementary school with five stereopticans. Dou you suppose the teachers want five stereopticans for only seventeen rooms?"

A letter from another teacher told a story of the flooding of a school with books.

"Books whenever requested," reads the letter. "Books we did not want, books we cannot use. They buy and buy and buy until they have so many books, I assume, the warehouse will not hold them. They ship them out of the schools to make room in the warehouse for the purchase of still more books."

What amounts almost to a confirmation of the last charge is supplied by the proposed budget. For text books last year $1,457,267 was appropriated, but this year the amount has been trimmed to $874,298.

COUNTY TO ATTACK ITS 1932 BUDGET TROUBLES TODAY

Troubles of the county board with the 1932 budget will begin today when the finance committee takes up the tentative outline prepared by County Auditor Lee Howard.

Some of the problems which face the commissioners as explained by Maurice Kavanagh, chairman of the finance committee, are:

1. A certain reduction in revenue, with no assurance that any 1930 or 1931 taxes will be collected during the period.

2. The necessity of a slash of at least 20 per cent in the county expenditures coupled with the almost equal necessity of maintaining the usual number of jobs.

3. A rehabilitation of county credit which has sunk to the level where no bonds can be sold.

4. The demand for the retirement of already overdue and defaulted bond issues.

5. The need for immediate cash to pay county employés, mother's pensioners, blind pensions, and county jurors, all of whom are owed a total of almost $3,000,000.

One of the measures near to the hearts of all the commissioners which already has been taken, provides that none of the present employés shall be lopped from the pay rolls.

Instead, a resolution has provided, each, employé will work one month of the 1932 fiscal year without salary and will take a payless vacation period.

It was the first flight of more than 100 miles over water in that type of airplane. Capt. Yancey hopped off at 1:30 p. m. eastern standard time and landed at Havana at 3:11 p. m.

POLICE SEARCH FOR MOTIVE IN DENTIST SLAYING

Ponders Features of Mystery.

Neither a motive nor a clew was developed yesterday in the murder mystery resulting from the slaying of Dr. James M. Shaffer, dentist, in his office at 3801 Broadway on Saturday afternoon. Coroner Frank J. Walsh and Capt. John Egan admitted they were baffled by the absence of anything tangible on which to base a theory or furnish a hint of the identity of the slayer.

They were holding Grover Hoose, 48 year old odd job man, on the statement of a woman who said she heard his voice in a plumbing office next to that of Dr. Shaffer. Hoose had an alibi with which, however, Lieut. William O'Brien said he was not altogether satisfied, although it seemed sufficient on the face of things to absolve him.

Ponder on Strange Features.

Coroner Walsh spent the afternoon with Capt. Egan questioning witnesses and pondering over the strange features of the slaying, which were as follows:

Dr. Shaffer was 54 years old and was financially embarrassed. His telephone service had been discontinued. He owed considerable rent. He shared a suite of offices with Dr. Samuel Holtzman, a physician and surgeon, who was on his way to a railroad station to send his four year old son to the home of relatives because Mrs. Holtzman was facing an operation this morning when he discovered that his associate, Dr. Shaffer, had been beaten over the head with a weapon of some kind and was on the point of death.

No Narcotics in Office.

Neither physician nor dentist kept narcotics in the office. None of the dentist's equipment was taken. He had 13 cents in his pocket. His watch was gone, but it is believed he may have put it in a safety deposit box were relatives said he probably had about $200.

Mrs. Ruth Wessinger, who lives on the floor above the doctor's office, gave the information about Hoose, who is called "Doc." Lieut. O'Brien at first thought Hoose was a dope addict, but the belief was not borne out. Mrs. Earl L. Salisbury, 3749 Pine Grove avenue, said Hoose was working in her home between 12:30 and 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, during which time Shaffer was killed. Her home is a block from the dentist's office.

Mrs. Bertha Moster, 734 Grace street, which is in the rear of 3801 Broadway, failed to substantiate Mrs. Wessinger's statement.

ARREST 64 PERSONS FOR SUNDAY FILMS AT PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Plainfield, N. J., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Sixty-four men and women—managers, ticket sellers, operators, and ushers—were arrested here today when the four local motion picture theaters opened for Sunday performances in defiance of the state "blue law," local custom, the opinion of part of the public, and a "ban" imposed by the city administration.

Fewer than 100 patrons had paid the regular admission fees and were watching the beginning of the presentations at each theater when a squad of policemen launched the drive to close them up.

EARL TURNS HIS RESIDENCE INTO 20 CENT MUSEUM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The earl of Lytton announced today that he will move out of Knebworth house, the home of the family for hundreds of years. He will throw it open to the public with admission at 20 cents per person in order to make ends meet. The earl and countess will move to a small manor house near by.

"The pressure of taxation and difficulties of living nowadays are the causes," Lord Lytton declared. "We cannot afford to run the house. The entrance fees will help but will not pay the cost of maintaining the building and gardens."

Knebworth is an ancient Tudor mansion begun in the reign of Henry VII. and often visited by Queen Elizabeth. The cost of insuring the costly historical relics with the building operated as a museum will eat up much of the revenue.

BOARD TO MEET TODAY TO PUSH TAX PAPER SALE

Senate Group to Discuss Funding Bills.

Renewed activity by the D. F. Kelly committee engaged in selling tax anticipation warrants for the relief of unpaid municipal workers and the school teachers is expected after a luncheon today at the Chicago club.

"The meeting," Mr. Kelly said last night, "will be attended by all those interested in the situation and we hope to make progress in the sale of the warrants as well as set up financial plans acceptable to the bankers for short cuts to put the 1930 tax bills in collection within a couple of weeks.

"Progress has been made with the passage of the so-called 'Kelly' plan by the legislature, but it must be realized that the first step is the finding of men who will take the jobs of assessing and reviewing property—the positions opened by the legislation. Gov. Emmerson has said that he will sign the bill as soon as he is assured that the men chosen intend to see that personal property bears its just share of taxation."

While the names of those who will meet today were not made public it is anticipated that a great many of those who were present when the Kelly plan was adopted will attend.

Senators to Meet.

At 10 a. m. Senator James J. Barbour [Rep., Evanston] will call his senate committee to order at the Stevens hotel for a consideration of the funding bills now before the assembly. Gov. Emmerson had intended to remain here for this meeting but his plans were changed yesterday morning and he left for Mount Vernon, his home, and will not be present.

Chief among the plans which will be brought before this group is the one by which the legislature would order a reassessment in Cook county for 1928, 1929, and 1930. The collection of 1930 taxes would be deferred until Oct. 1 and 60 per cent of the 1931 taxes would be funded.

Also before the committee are the bills in which the West Park board is asking $4,000,000 in bonds for the extension, maintenance and operation of the park system, and the $3,000,000 issue requested by the Lincoln Park board.

Hurley Delays Decision.

Edward N. Hurley, who has been asked to take the post of county assessor, both by Gov. Emmerson and Mayor Cermak, has not reached a decision yet, he said yesterday. He wishes a few days more to consider it. He intends to confer with the mayor today.

A subcommittee to investigate the proposed plan of the Associated Bond and Share corporation to purchase $20,000,000 worth of 1930 corporate tax warrants by paying $10,000,000 in cash and $10,000,000 in 1931 board of education warrants, probably will be appointed today by Ald. John S. Clark, chairman of the city council finance committee. Mayor Cermak, City Controller Szymczak and Corporation Counsel Sexton will be asked to sit with the committee when it considers the plan.

DECIDE TO OPERATE ON BABY'S HEAD TO TRY TO SAVE MIND

New York, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Efforts to locate the child's father in Detroit having failed, surgeons will waive the custom of requiring consent from both parents and perform a major operation that may save 13 months old Diane Moore from imbecility and helplessness.

The child, whose brain is unable to develop because her skull hardened prematurely, will be given a final examination at the Neurological institute tomorrow.

Specialists have said that unless the operation is attempted the baby will die or grow up an idiot and a cripple. While the operation was described as hazardous, two similar surgical feats are known to have been successful.

The girl's mother, Mrs. Lillian Moore, said today she would wait no longer to hear from her husband, who, she said, left her shortly after the baby's birth.

LASH TAMMANY IN 50,000 WORD SEABURY REPORT

BY TOM PETTEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Samuel Seabury, who has uncovered a mountain of sordid scandals in this city's municipal administration, put them all into an "intermediate" report today and sent the report to the Hofstadter legislative committee, of which he is chief counsel. Tomorrow, a copy of the report will be placed on the desk of each member of the New York legislature.

SAMUEL SEABURY.

Constructive legislative changes, Mr. Seabury said, would be necessary to raise the government of New York City from "the low and sordid estate to which it has sunk." Mr. Seabury, however, made no specific recommendations for legislation, saying that would come when the investigation is concluded and a final report is submitted. He did, however, indicate drastic reforms to come.

Extend Life of Committee.

The present report will be used along with a minority paper as a basis for the report the legislature has ordered for Feb. 1. The state senate has voted to extend the life of the committee for one year and the assembly is expected to vote on the question this week.

Mr. Seabury asserted that the "graft and corruption" established by the investigation are a part of a system controlled by Tammany Hall, which permeates the city government. He charged Tammany with having "done everything within its power to obstruct and interfere with the exposure of conditions."

The report reviews all evidence presented regarding abuses before the board of standards and appeals, George W. Olvany, former Tammany chief's silent representation in matters before the board, the tin box fortunes of many other Tammany leaders, gambling in political clubs, police protection of bootleggers, pier lease scandals, graft in unemployment funds, the judgeship deals, and a score of other cases, including that against Russell T. Sherwood, financial agent of Mayor James J. Walker.

Mr. Seabury's report contains more than 50,000 words, covering findings since August, 1930, when Mr. Seabury took up his task, but touches lightly upon the Magistrates' court scandals and vice graft revelations, as those features were covered in a previous situation.

Tammany's Obstructive Tactics.

Mr. Seabury reiterated a previous charge that "waste, graft, and corruption were responsible for the city's financial condition," and denied that the investigation was impairing the city's credit.

Discussing the obstructive tactics of Tammany, Mr. Seabury pointed to the disappearance of Mr. Sherwood, the mayor's financial agent; efforts made by State Senator John A. Hastings to avoid testifying; the vanishing of Charles Brady, former superintendent of buildings, and other important witnesses; the litigations centering about Dr. William F. Doyle, the veterinarian with a political pull, and other similar instances. Regarding Sherwood and the joint deposit box he holds with Mayor Walker, Mr. Seabury said:

"Throughout this period, his associate, the mayor, has not, by a single public utterance or act, made any attempt to induce his fugitive agent to return."

Mr. Seabury hints at prosecutions to come and reports, "whatever may be the duty of others with respect to the testimony adduced before the committee, the sole function of the committee is to establish the facts. . . ."

BACKSTAGE FIRE ROUTS PATRONS FROM THEATER

Fire backstage yesterday during a performance at the Lawndale Yiddish theater, 4015 Roosevelt road, started a near panic among the 400 spectators in the place.

The blaze, starting from an undetermined cause, attacked scenery and drapes and smoke began to roll into the auditorium before the asbestos curtain was lowered. The spectators rushed for the exits, but due to the fact that the theater was only half filled no one was hurt. Two women were reported to have fainted.

Charles Nelson, 3525 Douglas boulevard, manager of the house, estimated the damage to the scenery at $20,000. Firemen led by Battalion Chief Henry Kerr put the fire out before it spread.

DISCOVER CLEW TO SLAYING OF CHINESE PASTOR

Capt. Charles Larkin of the Pekin Inn police yesterday advanced a theory that the Rev. H. Frank Cham, Chinese pastor whose body was found on Friday in the basement of the Chinese Church of Christ at 2301 Wentworth avenue, may have been killed by a man for whom he was writing a letter.

The minister, who was pastor of the church, was hacked to death with a hatchet. It was apparent that he had been writing just before the fatal blows were struck. A pen lay near his right hand and there was an unfinished note, in Chinese characters, on a desk nearby.

This note was addressed "Dear Mother," and related that the writer had been in Chicago for three months and had not been able to find work. The minister's mother, the police learned, is dead, and Capt. Larkin is of the opinion that a recently arrived Chinese who had appealed to the Rev. Mr. Cham to write for him became angered while the later was working on the letter and killed him.

BROTHER DANIEL PROVES A REPORT IS EXAGGERATED

Plainfield, Wis., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Louis and Arthur Richtmyre, farmers from North Cape, Wis., arrived here a few days ago. As they drove up to the home of their sister a man who looked familiar to them crawled out from under an automobile.

"What are you doing there?" asked Louis in a shocked tone.

"Fixing this car so I can go places," was the answer.

"Well," said Louis, "we got a telegram saying you were dead, but if you are not going anywhere except in an automobile I guess the telegram was wrong and you are still my brother Daniel and alive."

"Guess I am," said Daniel.

Investigation disclosed that the brothers from North Cape had received a garbled telegram which indicated that their brother Daniel had died at Wild Rose, Wis., and which was intended to report the death of their uncle William.

NEW YORK CITY DEBT NOW OVER 2 BILLION MARK

Gross Turnover in 1931 Is $2,860,267,614.

New York, Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Controller Charles W. Berry's annual digest of New York's financial affairs issued today shows that during 1931 the city received $1,413,867,997 from all sources and paid out a total of $1,446,393,616. The gross financial turnover for the year was $2,860,267,614.

The controller's statement is issued about this time each year as a forerunner to the more detailed analysis due about the end of next month.

649 Millions in Taxes.

The bulk of the city's revenue, amounting to $649,744,946, was received from real estate and personal property taxes, assessments, water rents, payments from the state for school, revenues from rents, franchises, permits, privileges, licenses, fees, fines, penalties and the city's share in the various state taxes such as the income and motor vehicle taxes. The remainder of the total received represents money borrowed from funds.

During 1931 new debt to the amount of $189,295,000 was created. Debt paid off amounted to $71,039,578, leaving the outstanding debt on Dec. 31, 1931, at $2,246,100,994. In the last six years new debt has been created in the total amount of $932,315,925. In this period the total of debt redemption amounted to $252,068,656.

Taxes on real and personal property combined with the assessments on city and borough realty collectible with taxes brought in a total of $478,057,899.

State Provides 33 Million.

Assessments collected for local improvements accounted for $17,821,527 additional. Water rents of all kinds produced revenues amounting to $25,424,839. State aid for the city's schools amounted to $46,190,064. The city's share of the income tax and other taxes levied by the state brought in more than $33,000,000.

On the other side of the ledger, the city paid out $218,960,376 for interest on and redemption and amortization of the city's funded debt. This was the largest item of expense during the year. Educational activities, including libraries, required the next largest expenditure, $186,315,586.

Rapid transit expenditures totaled $102,860,894.

Lesser expenditures include $58,757,181 to the police department; $44,123,237 for water supply; $44,916,857.40 to the sanitation department; $36,507,835.38 for pensions and relief funds; $36,080,347.90 for health, including hospitals; $31,713,510.38 for street, highway, and bridge improvements; $26,009,744.01 for the fire department and $26,391,963.22 for public welfare.

KILLED BY POISON

DR. EUGENE C. GLOVER.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 24.—(AP)—Cyanide, absorbed probably from a solution with which he was making experiments in a search to discover a substance to retard the growth of cancer, caused the death of Dr. Ernest Chellis Glover, Medical Examiner Timothy J. Leary said tonight.

Dr. Glover was stricken Friday while working in a little laboratory at City hospital.

As the result of a chemical analysis, there was no doubt, Dr. Leary said, that cyanide caused death. How the poison was absorbed, the medical examiner could not say. He added, however, that the solution with which Dr. Glover was working probably furnished the means.

Asks Half Billion Slash in Expenditures.

The committee criticized federal aid to the states, the result of which has been undue stimulation of both federal and state expenditures wherever the matching of federal aid expenditures is required of the states. Federal aid highway construction, the expenditures on which rose from five millions in 1916 to 239 millions in 1931, was cited as an example. The committee urges congress to adopt a considered federal aid policy, discontinuing some altogether, and radically curtailing expenditures on the remainder.

Would Liquidate Farm Board.

Of the 500 million dollar revolving fund granted it by the congress the federal farm board has about 350 millions in outstanding inventories and loans, the committee found. It suggested that congress consider the returning to the treasury of the remaining 150 millions and as much more as can be liquidated. Additional appropriations for th farm board are opposed.

The committee favors completion of the public works construction program which calls for 411 millions this fiscal year, but as a measure for relieving unemployment it suggests that "the present depression has proved too deep and too broad to be much alleviated by any practicable and prudent public building program."

The department of agriculture, the expenditures of which rose from 126 millions in 1923 to 297 millions in 1931, "carries on a very considerable amount of educational and social work, some of it reaching down to individual homes," says the report. "Activities of this character should be carefully examined with the view of eliminating all those of doubtful advisability."

Commerce Department Expands.

The department of commerce has increased its expenditures more rapidly than any other, its budget in 1931 having been three times that of 1923. The bureau of foreign and domestic commerce expended five millions last year, compared with $1,600,000 in 1923, a 212 per cent increase.

"It would seem," says the committee, "that this bureau might well be examined for the purpose of ascertaining if there has not been an undue expansion. It is true that some of the existing activities of this bureau have been urged by trade associations and other business organizations, including the United States Chamber of Commerce. Examination should be made to ascertain if some of these activities which were originally undertaken to assist certain industries or lines of business have not achieved their purpose and can now be abandoned. The activities of the bureau should also be scrutinized to determine if some of its present activities cannot better be left to private interests."

Of the department of labor, the cost of which has doubled in recent years, the committee said that much of the statistical work might be performed by the census bureau and that "some of the social activities" of the women's and children's bureaus "appear to be of doubtful necessity in time of emergency."

Would Delay Naval Building.

To bring the navy up to treaty limits would cost between 750 million and 1 billion, the 1932 budget carrying 38 millions for new construction.

"Since an international conference," says the committee, "is soon to be held to consider the question it would not seem in the interest of economy to start new naval construction, beyond that contracted for but rather that new construction should be suspended, at least until the future status of the navy can be more definitely determined."

The committee recommends consideration of a consolidation of the war and navy departments under a single head.

"At present," says the report, "there appears to be much duplication between the two branches of the service. Recruiting stations, warehouses, purchasing agents, etc., of the two branches are frequently found side by side and were there some combinations it would seem entirely possible that this duplication could be minimized and economies effected. Another apparent duplication is the fact that the navy maintains an infantry corps, while the army has a transport fleet."

ROBBERS' VICTIM WOUNDED.

Charles Bribac, 23 years old, 1839 West 47th street, was wounded in the shoulder late Saturday night when he resisted three men who tried to rob him in front of 1340 West 50th street. With Bribac was Frank Gudiak, 5006 South Elizabeth street. The robbers fled without loot.

GEMS SENTIMENTALLY PRIZED ARE REPORTED LOST BY MRS. PHELPS

New York, Jan. 24.—[Special.]—A bracelet of diamonds and emeralds was lost last Tuesday by Mrs. Muriel Vanderbilt Church Phelps, it was learned today. Over the telephone tonight from her present residence at Newport, R. I., Mrs. Phelps said she did not know the exact value of the piece, but guessed at "not more than $5,000." It was of sentimental value to her, however, she said, because it had been a gift from a member of her family.

Mrs. Phelps was visiting her mother, Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt, at 60 East 93d street. She had the bracelet wrapped in tissue paper, in a small handbag. On Tuesday afternoon she started out to see some friends, not noticing a small hole in the bottom of the bag. Late in the afternoon she chanced to open it and found that the bracelet and its coverings had disappeared.

CERMAK TELLS WHY HE BACKS RELIEF TO POOR

Calls It Insurance on City's Safety.

Speaking both as the chief executive of Chicago and from his own observations in the fields of business and charity, Mayor Cermak told yesterday why he believes adoption of the $20,000,000 state unemployment relief program is an urgent necessity.

Mayor Cermak spoke first from the humanitarian standpoint. Funds of private charities, including the $10,000,000 raised in the city by the Joint Emergency Relief fund, are either exhausted already or will be gone by Feb. 1. Where one family sought aid a year ago, five seek it today. To the "chronic poor" have been added others who need help—the small home owners and the white collar class.

Tells Dangers of Defeat.

Then he spoke of what may happen if relief is not forthcoming. He sought to minimize the danger, but his tones showed that as the ex-officio guardian of Chicago's law and order he is gravely apprehensive of the menace to public safety of thousands of hungry and desperate men.

"This is civic fire insurance," he said. "These communist organizers are not new in our city. We had them in times of plenty. But now they find men more ready to listen to them. I say to the men who may object to this public relief because it will add to the tax burden on their property, that they should be glad to pay it, for it is the best way of insuring that they keep that property."

Mayor Cermak told why he is "somewhat familiar" with Chicago's relief problem. As president of the Cook county board for eight years, he administered the county charitable services. As president for ten years, and a director for twenty-five, he has served a charitable organization working among the Bohemian people of the city.

Charities' Reserves Depleted.

"In the past," he said, "our charitable organizations have had a reserve for emergencies. That has been depleted in the last two years. There is not an organization, large or small, which has not spent every dollar it has. Unless relief is granted by Feb. 1, nobody knows what will happen.

"Where we had one applicant before, we have five seeking help today. On the other hand, from the contributor who gave us $1,000 a year ago, we are lucky to get $100 today. The man who gave $100 then can only afford $10 now. And those who gave us $25 or $10 then, are today knocking on our door for relief.

Tells of Several Cases.

"These white collar men are a new factor in the relief situation. I know of a number of men who earned $500 a month and paid $200 a month for an apartment. When they lost their jobs, they tried at first to keep up a front. They exhausted their savings. Where at first they refused jobs at lower salaries, today they would be glad to have work at any wage. They have moved to poorer neighborhoods, where they have no neighbors who know of their plight and would help them. Today many of these men are desperate. Some, I know, have taken their children out of school because they cannot clothe them."

Mayor Cermak referred to the situation of another class, the owners of small homes. Under the law, a property owner is not entitled to relief from the county or other public agencies.

"Many people who have their life savings invested in their home are starving today to meet their obligations," he said.

"Chicago is harder hit than the rest of the state," he continued. "There is suffering in many little towns where factories have shut down and pay rolls stopped, but many downstaters don't understand the situation here. Farmers may be suffering from low prices and mortgages, but they have a roof over their head and can raise enough on their land to feed their families."

Two Methods Suggested.

Two methods have been suggested for raising money for the $20,000,000 relief appropriation, of which about half would go to Cook county relief agencies through the machinery set up by the governor's relief commission. One is an added 2 cent gasoline tax, the other a bond issue which would have to be submitted to a referendum next November. Bankers have suggested that it will probably be possible for the state to sell $20,000,000 worth of tax warrants immediately if the relief legislation is passed.

The gasoline tax would have one advantage, the mayor pointed out. Chicago could use its share for relief, and downstate counties could use what they need for that purpose and use any excess funds for road building.

BOY PICKED AS YALE TYPE

John Cameron, Tilden High school athlete (left), being greeted by Edmund K. Welles, president of Yale Club of Chicago.

Ideal Student

The qualifications for an ideal college student of the present day have been outlined by the Yale Club of Chicago after an exhaustive examination of the records of boys who have applied for Yale scholarships offered annually since 1903.

Among the qualities stressed are: the student must be hard-working and desirous of getting ahead by his own efforts; must work well with a minimum of supervision; must be above the average in scholarship and take an active interest in the activities of his class. He may or may not be an athlete of note. To be eligible for the scholarship given by the club the candidate should come from a home of moderate means and earn a part of his living while going to school.

Edmund K. Welles, president of the club, said yesterday that John Cameron, a student at Tilden Tech, could be pointed out as a type of the youth most likely to succeed in college. He can measure up to all the qualifications, according to President Welles. Cameron is captain of the school track team and has run 100 yards in 10.2 seconds.

WOODRUFF, GEYER ON TRIAL TODAY IN BANK CASE

The trial of Norman O. Geyer and George Woodruff on charges of conspiracy growing out of the closing of the Waukegan State bank on June 17, will begin today before Circuit Judge Edward Shurtleff in Woodstock. The case was moved from Lake to McHenry county on a change of venue.

GEORGE WOODRUFF

Geyer was president of the Waukegan bank when it closed. Woodruff, at the time the acts of conspiracy are alleged to have occurred, was vice chairman of the National Bank of the Republic in Chicago. They are charged with conspiracy to keep the bank open when it was insolvent, obtaining deposits by false pretenses and deceiving depositors by false representations.

Similar charges are pending against State Auditor Oscar Nelson, John Murray Connors, a former vice president of the Waukegan bank, and William H. Miller, a former vice president of the National Bank of the Republic.

NORTHUP HOPES TO END SANITARY CASE WITH A BANG

State Expects to Finish Evidence Today.

The prosecution hopes to conclude today its side of the sanitary district graft conspiracy case, which has been in progress in Chief Justice Harry Fisher's Criminal court, since Dec. 8. Timothy J. Crowe, president of the district during the whoopee period of 1927-1928, and six others are on trial.

First Assistant State's Attorney Northup says he expects to end his case with a double climax. He hopes to show first that a construction company was given contracts calling for approximately $1,000,000 worth of reconditioning work on the district plants, and that in reality the work was parceled out to subcontractors and that the district paid double prices for the work and materials.

Whoopee Records Next.

The second climax, the prosecutor said, will be the introduction of the whoopee records. Every effort has been made to thwart this move, Prosecutor Northup said, but he hopes to get in these records, which show that the former officials bought whisky, beer and champagne with the taxpayers' money.

The whoopee records, the prosecutor said, will show that the employés of Crowe's régime did not believe in exercising their legs; that they even used taxicabs to go to the tailor for a new suit. The taxicab bill, which includes the whoopee charges, will show expenditures, it is said, of well in excess of $100,000.

Records of the Tully-Costello Contracting company and of the sanitary district will be used to show the double payments for work, it is said. The contracting firm was paid in full by the district, it is said. The company paid the subcontractors. It is charged that many subcontractors also submitted duplicate bills to the district and collected again.

Northup Prepares Summary.

Prosecutor Northup spent the weekend preparing a summary of the evidence so far produced. He is preparing to meet the expected argument of the defense that the prosecution has not proved a conspiracy. Attorneys Albert Fink and John McInerney, for the defense, will argue this subject, it was announced, as soon as the prosecution makes the announcement that its case is closed.

It was rumored that the defense is relying on these arguments to acquit the defendants. Reports that the only Trustees John Touhy and James Whalen and former Trustee August Miller will testify in their own behalf.

Touhy's name has not been mentioned at all other than that the records show he voted favorably on some of the projects involved in the evidence. The same is true of Miller, except that his name crept out several times as sponsoring payrollers. Whalen's name was mentioned several times by witnesses as being in the "Crowe-Whalen-Rosenberg" combination and of sponsoring some payrollers. Crowe and Frank J. Link, who was the lone Daneen Republican representative on the board, bore the brunt of the attack by the prosecution. Their names were mentioned time and time again as sponsoring the thousands of payrollers and of using district funds for various purposes.

Realty Agent Mentioned.

Martin Edelstein, former real estate agent for the board, has been mentioned in connection with payroll forgeries, and John T. Miller, former superintendent of the permanent plants and structures department, was named in connection with the $1,068,000 horseless cinder bridle path as well as in regard to the exorbitant payments for work to dummy concerns.

The trial of the case is one of the longest ever held in the Criminal courts of the county. Prosecutor Northup said. The prosecution has called approximately 1,500 witnesses in their efforts to prove the $6,500,000 conspiracy charged in the indictment.

INSULL JR. PRAISES JEWISH CHARITIES AT 32D ANNUAL MEETING

High praise was given to the Jewish Charities of Chicago for their part in the poor relief work now going forward by Samuel Insull Jr. last night at the organization's 32d annual meeting in the Standard club. Each of the speakers before the 1,000 people present took the opportunity to honor Julius Rosenwald, who for years preceding his death was a substantial contributor to the charities' funds.

Accounting his stewardship as an official of the Joint Emergency Relief Fund campaign, Mr. Insull told briefly of the raising of the $10,500,000 sum and its rapid expenditure to almost half a million people now in want. On Jan. 1 more than $6,400,000 had been used for family support, he said, adding that the entire fund would be completely depleted by Feb. 1 unless additions are made to it.

The legislature, he explained, will be asked to provide this help, and he predicted it would be forthcoming, "for the legislators and Gov. Emmerson realize the gravity of the situation and party politics will not interfere."

Officers making reports to the assemblage were the acting president, Sol Kline; James H. Becker, treasurer, and Samuel A. Goldsmith, executive director. Leo F. Wormser was chairman of the meeting.

Lawyer Leaps to Death Despite Brother's Pleas

New York, Jan. 24.—(AP)—While his brother leaned from a window of an adjoining suite and begged him not to jump, Erroll O'Brien, 43, an attorney and former magistrate in the British West Indies, plunged to his death today from the tenth floor of the Hotel Woodward. The body crashed through a glass marquee, narrowly missing a doorman. O'Brien recently was released from a sanitarium.

35 CHINESE DIE IN BLAST; PANIC GRIPS SHANGHAI

Explosives Blow Up; Entire City Is Shaken.

craft guns are stripped for action and all foreign defense forces and the foreign area police are being held in readiness to meet any emergency.

It is believed that China is certain to refuse to acquiesce with the Japanese demand, upon which the Japanese naval forces here, following the example set by the Japanese army in Manchuria, are believed certain to adopt aggressive policies.

Ready to Seize Forts.

They are already prepared to forcibly seize the Woosung forts at the river mouth below Shanghai as well as the Lunghwa arsenal and the entire area of the Chinese city which tonight is garrisoned by less than 5,000 frightened troops.

High Japanese officials admit revival of the project to drag from retirement Henry Pu Yi, former boy emperor, and elevate him to the dummy position of "president" of the proposed new republic of Manchuria, inner Mongolia and Jehol.

Chinese Fear Financial Loss.

SHANGHAI, China, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Chinese business men intervened tonight in an effort to avert financial loss from Japanese occupation of Shanghai as a consequence of anti-Japanese disorders.

They urged the national government at Nanking to instruct Wu Teh-Chen, Chinese mayor of Shanghai, to agree unconditionally to the Japanese demands. These demands call for disbanding of anti-Japanese societies and the payment of damages for a recent attack on Buddhist monks.

The Chinese business men informed the national government that the country's economic structure was in no condition to withstand a foreign military occupation of the nation's commercial and financial metropolis.

The Japanese Cotton Spinners' association of Shanghai added another threat. They said that as a result of the Chinese boycott they might soon be forced to close their 12 mills, throwing 70,000 Chinese employés out of work.

Honolulu Places Police Force on Probation for One Year

HONOLULU, Jan. 24.—(AP)—This city's new police commission, created as a step toward solution of the "crime wave," today notified all members of the police force they would be reappointed for a probationary period of one year, starting Feb. 1, when the commission takes office.

Meanwhile attorneys for Mrs. Granville Fortescue, Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, and two enlisted naval men, O. A. Jones and E. J. Lord, prepared to appear tomorrow in the Circuit court to argue a motion to dismiss the police court charge of murder brought against them in connection with the death of Joseph Kahahawai, suspected attacker of Mrs. Massie.

Business Man Is Head.

Defense attorneys contend the prosecution unduly delayed presentation of the case to the grand jury, damaging the constitutional rights of the four to a prompt trial.

The police commission, created last week at the special session of the legislature, named Frederick D. Lowrey, prominent business man, as chairman. The commission is studying applications for the position of chief of police. The law states the chief must have been a resident of Honolulu for five years.

Tomorrow the senate resumes deliberations on a public prosecutor bill. So far it has been unable to decide whether he shall be elective and a member of the attorney general's office or appointed by the governor.

A "rotten police force," melodramatic films, and "lurid accounts" of crime in the United States were blamed today by Walter F. Dillingham, local business leader, for the growth of crime in Honolulu.

Inspired by Movies.

"The result of the lack of strong leadership has split the police department into factions, with one group nullifying the efforts of the other," he said. "Street corner gangs, hotbeds for sprouting criminals, have been unmolested, or when the leaders were apprehended by police they were not punished. These youths of mixed races, seeking excitement inspired by melodramatic movies, and lurid accounts of crimes on the mainland, have been encouraged to acts of violence."

JAPAN SEEN AS PEACE BARRIER IN FAR EAST BY SOVIET NEWS ORGAN

MOSCOW, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Izvestia, government newspaper, said today that if Japan rejected the soviet proposal for a nonaggression pact, as predicted in the Japanese press, it would be "a blow to the question of peace in the far east."

The newspaper said public opinion of the world already regards the Japanese policy in Manchuria as endangering peace.

"We think," it said, "that Japan would regret such a step, because it would further convince the masses of the world that Japan has only aims of occupation and does not wants its hands tied. We are not making a fetish of nonaggression treaties, but they undoubtedly are obstacles for the prevention of war."

"The Japanese press," Izvestia continued, "is ridiculous when it declares that Japan and soviet Russia enjoy such friendly relations that no guarantee pact is necessary, that Japan has no intention of attacking soviet Russia and that soviet Russia has no intention of attacking Japan. Of course, the latter is not to be doubted, but soviet Russia is obliged to do the utmost to defend the whole matter of peace."

PHILIPPINE BODY CABLES U. S. FOR LIBERTY AT ONCE

MANILA, Jan. 25.—(AP)—[Monday.]—A group of independence advocates headed by Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo, president of the Veterans of the Revolution, today cabled Chairman Hare of the house insular committee that "a great majority of the Philippine people" favor a self-executory grant of independence at a definitely established date.

The cable said immediate independence is desired with only such delay as is necessary for the orderly transfer of sovereignty. Several bills now before congress provide for a self-executory transition period.

Gen. Aguinaldo led the Philippine insurrection against the United States in 1899-1901. Others who signed the cablegram were former Senator Juan Sumulong, Gregorio Aglipay, head of the independent Philippine church, and Vincente Sotto, head of the Philippine Civil union which was organized to oppose a compromise on the independence issue.

Chinese Brigands Ponder Fate of Kidnaped Yankee

HANKOW, China, Jan. 24.—(AP)—A message from the American gunboat Ohau tonight said an emissary of the brigands who kidnaped Capt. Charles Baker, American, last week had arrived and reported his masters were deliberating over Baker's fate. The emissary said the bandits, stationed 70 miles north of the gunboat's position, would notify the Cahu or the American consulate at Hankow "when their demands had been determined."

Boy Will Recover After 123 Days in Robot Lung

Beacon, N. Y., Jan. 24.—(AP)—After spending 123 days in an artificial respirator at Vassar hospital, Birdsall Sweet, 14, once helpless with paralysis and unable to breathe without its aid, today showed such improvement he was able to test his own respiratory organs for a four-hour stretch. Dr. Scott L. Smith, the boy's physician, said that while complete recovery would be a tedious process, it now appeared assured.

SECRETARY QUITS LEAGUE; ANGRY AT STAND ON JAPAN

Organization Confronts Internal Crisis.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Jan. 24.—On the eve of the international disarmament conference which it is sponsoring, the league of nations is facing one of the most serious internal crises of its existence.

It was fully confirmed tonight that Sir Eric Drummond, who has held the post of secretary general since peace conference days, will submit his resignation to the league council when it meets tomorrow morning. Strong efforts will be made to persuade Sir Eric to change his mind, however, and it is possible the efforts will succeed.

Sharp Criticism Heard.

While league circles persist in declaring that Sir Eric's decision is due solely to personal motives, it is known in well informed quarters that the Manchurian dispute is the real reason for his projected resignation.

Sharp criticism of the Geneva secretariat has been heard from several governments because of the extreme position taken by the league in the early stages of the Manchurian conflict. There have even been charges that Sir Eric tried to force the hand of the powers by committing them to drastic action in defense of the league covenant which might have led to war with Japan.

Sir Eric Irked by Council Steps.

The secretary general likewise is known to be disgusted with the evident "pussyfooting" of the council during its Paris session and to feel deeply the resultant loss of prestige suffered by the league.

Sir Eric's gesture may have a vital effect on the Manchurian deliberations which will be renewed here on Tuesday. In some quarters it is believed that he will consent to reconsider his resignation only if the council undertakes to bolster up the authority of the league by taking a stern attitude toward Japan.

RESIGNS

SIR ERIC DRUMMOND.

KIDNAPED BAKER HOME; AGREED TO PAY $50,000

Denver Man Asserts He Was Not Injured.

Denver, Colo., Jan. 24.—(AP)—After five days of captivity during which he was kept bound and blindfolded in a mountain cabin, Benjamin P. Bower, kidnaped Denver bakery official, was released from an automobile in West Denver today.

His freedom, he said, was gained on a promise to pay the $50,000 ransom demanded last Tuesday night when two men invaded his home and carried him away. No money, he said, has yet been paid.

Clutching two strips of adhesive tape, Bower was found by two youths early this morning in a dark street near the bakery of which he is manager. Telling them who he was, Bower asked to be led to a telephone from which he called the bakery. Police were called at once and he was taken to headquarters.

The tape, he said, had been over his eyes for the five days he was a captive with exception of a few moments when he wrote a note to his wife pleading that she pay $50,000 ransom.

Bower was treated well and fed plentifully, he said.

The kidnaping, Bower said, has cost him only $4.60 and his royal arch Masonic pin.

The kidnapers grew tired of the way things were going and offered a compromise—that he should return and get the money, Bower told Chief Clark.

"They said: 'You can get it from Knight' [Stephen Knight, president of the Campbell-Sell Baking company]," Bower said.

Bower, after his long period of enforced blindness, hesitated to believe it was Sunday when he was found.

Bank Building Burned; Safe Is Buried in Ruins

Mansfield, O., Jan. 24.—(AP)—Fire destroyed the Farmers' and Citizens' Bank building at Tiro, northeast of here today, causing an estimated loss of $30,000. A safe containing $115,000 in cash and securities was buried in the wreckage.

Gandhi's 'Shrine' Raided; Police Get Book by Thoreau

AHMEDABAD, India, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Mahatma Gandhi's "Shrine of Brotherhood," or Ashram, was raided by police today, but nothing incriminating was found other than a copy of Thoreau's essay, "Civil Disobedience." A considerable quantity of fodder, used to feed Gandhi's 125 cows, was attached on the refusal of the manager of his dairy farm to pay land taxes.

SHOT BY ROBBER, HE SAYS.

Frank Jennings, 28 years old, colored, 1218 Washburne avenue, was taken to the Bridewell hospital late Saturday night by the police with a bullet wound in his chest. He said he was shot by a robber at Peoria and Maxwell streets.

FLEETWOOD

THE DANCE OF LIFE

If you have read Havelock Ellis' interesting book under the above title, you will recall how he points out that science and art, alike, are founded in the secret rhythms of nature. Science seeks to present these secrets to our minds, while art interprets them to our emotions. So the two go hand in hand, and the great exponent of each recognizes and rejoices in his kinship with the other.

This relation of science and art is often illustrated in modern manufacture—brilliantly, we point out, in the case of the automobile. Here, by a happy alliance, pre-eminent artists are today joined with pre-eminent scientists—craftsmen from the custom shops of Fleetwood and engineers from Cadillac's great laboratories. The result is a combination so naturally harmonious and so supremely capable that the fruit of its labors is something which cannot be pictured in the light of any previous accomplishments in custom coachcraft.

This you may determine for yourself, for the supreme expression of Fleetwood coachcraft is now presented in various models of the new Cadillac V-8, V-12 and V-16. In these cars you will see, as nothing else can show you, how men, too, may blend beauty and usefulness, just as it is done in the works of nature.

DEMOCRATS MEET TODAY TO PLAN COUNTY SLATE

State's Attorney, Court Clerk Places Open.

The Democratic slate making for county offices begins in earnest this morning when the county central committee, of which Patrick A. Nash is chairman, convenes at 11 o'clock in the Hotel Sherman.

PATRICK NASH.

Hoping that the November elections will sweep their party into power locally as well as nationally, almost every ward organization has prepared a list of candidates for the few places on the ticket left open. The principal offices for which candidates have not already been picked, it is said, are state's attorney and clerks of the Circuit and Appellate courts. In addition a great scramble is expected for places on the Municipal bench.

Talked for State's Attorney.

Yesterday, political gossip listed five candidates for state's attorney—Circuit Judges John P. McGoorty and Joseph Burke, Superior Judge Michael McKinley, and Municipal Judges Frank M. Padden and Matthew D. Hartigan. The first three are considered the leading contenders.

A battle for the Appellate clerkship is expected because of the financial possibilities of the office—it being operated under the fee system. Circuit Court Clerk Thomas O. Wallace, virtually the only Republican official left in the county building, now that the Kelly bill abolishing the boards of assessors and reviewers has been adopted by the legislature, faces a stiff fight with scores of Democrats clamoring for his post.

In the other offices, Recorder Clayton F. Smith is not facing consequential opposition, if he does not become the choice to make the run for governor. The same holds true for the new coroner, Frank J. Walsh, it is said, and for Superior Court Clerk Frank Zintak. Sanitary Trustees Woodhull, Friedman and Tuohy are similarly situated.

At today's meeting a five-member committee will be appointed to confer on the slate making with an equal number from the state central committee.

Lyle Out for State's Attorney.

Judge John H. Lyle, Republican primary candidate for mayor last year, announced last night his candidacy for state's attorney. His headquarters are in the Sherman hotel.

"My candidacy means the breaking up of organized gangs of gunmen, bombers, kidnapers, racketeers, and criminals," declared the statement. "It means a reduction of the crushing burden of taxes by saving some of the $26,000,000 which is the minimum estimate of the present cost of crime in Chicago and Cook county."

COST OF APPENDIX TO CONGRESSIONAL RECORD $840 A DAY

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—A study of the Congressional Record for the present session of congress indicates that Senator Reed Smoot [Rep., Utah] knew what he was talking about when he recently urged a legislative operation to remove the appendix to the record.

For it has cost nearly $23,000 to print twenty-seven daily editions of the "rat hole," which Senator Smoot termed the appendix.

It costs $40 to print one page of the appendix. Since last Dec. 7, when congress convened, the appendix has appeared in all but three of the thirty Congressional Records. The total number of pages printed thus far this session is 568, which, at $40 a page, brings the total cost of the "rat hole" for twenty-seven days to $22,720.

The average size of the appendix for the 27 days on which it has appeared this session has been 21 pages. At $40 a page, therefore, it has cost $840 a day.

All a member of congress has to do is to say "I ask unanimous consent to insert in the Record." The Vice President or the speaker, as the case may be, replies, "I hear no objection" and it's all over at $40 a page.

The appendix is given over to publication of undelivered speeches by members, speeches and radio talks by members and nonmembers, editorials, newspaper stories, poetry, magazine articles, and general comment on every conceivable subject.

Boys Hitch Auto Ride, Cut Hole in Top, Steal Purse

A new kind of thief was discovered last night. Miss Alice Geimer, 445 West Garfield boulevard, was the victim. She was driving her car south in Parnell avenue. At 65th street she saw a hand reach in through the top of the car and seize her purse, containing two rings valued at $1,100. Then she saw three boys jump off the rear of the car and run away. As police reconstructed the theft, the boys hitched a ride on the rear of the automobile. One, using a knife, cut a hole in the top of the car, reached in and took the purse.

Fire in Vacant Building Downtown; Loss $20,000

Fire which started early this morning on the third floor of the vacant four story building at 554 West Jackson boulevard and spread to the second and fourth floors caused damage estimated at $20,000. A 2—11 alarm summoned extra apparatus, and within half an hour the blaze was extinguished. Firemen devoted much of their effort to prevent the flames from spreading to the adjoining structure of Schaar & Co., 556 Jackson boulevard, a chemical house.

HELD UP IN STORE.

John Tasznoneski, owner of a drug store at 5415 Drummond place, was robbed of $24 yesterday by a gunman.

M'ADOO, GLASS ARE BLAMED FOR WAR DEBT CUTS

Hyde Charges They Made Illegal Loans.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—If Secretaries of the Treasury William G. McAdoo and Carter Glass had complied with the terms of the Liberty loan legislation, the United States, Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde charged tonight, would not have been compelled to cancel 50 per cent of the war debts and would not now be threatened with the repudiation by Europe of the 11 billions still due.

ARTHUR M. HYDE.

Mr. Hyde accused Messrs. McAdoo and Glass of making unsecured loans to the allies, in contravention of law, and accused Mr. Glass of making 1½ billions of loans after the armistice for purposes not authorized by the Liberty loan acts.

"It is perfectly evident," said Mr. Hyde, "that if the provisions of the law had been followed in making loans to foreign governments we should have had, not demand notes which had later to be funded and scaled down, but marketable obligations of foreign governments bearing, as the law required, a rate of interest not less than the Liberty loans from which the money was derived and containing substantially the same terms and conditions.

"Such loans would not have become enmeshed in questions of reparations, in which we had no share, and which were no part of their consideration. We got no colonies. We did not ask to be made whole by reparations, and if Mr. McAdoo and Mr. Glass had followed the plain terms of the Liberty loan acts which were their sole source of authority we should not now be engaged in endless international complications and debate."

The strictures uttered by the secretary of agriculture were in continuation of his controversy with Senator Glass [Dem., Va.] over the legality of the post armistice loans while Mr. Glass was secretary of the treasury. Mr. Hyde cited the efforts of Messrs. McAdoo and Glass to procure legislation after the armistice providing for loans for other purposes than those specified in the loan acts for conduct of the war. He quoted Mr. McAdoo as stating to congress that he wanted power to lend "for other purposes than those necessitated by the war" because "we have no authority to make such loans."

Senator Glass in reply characterized Mr. Hyde's criticism as "assinine and uninformed" and said the legislation he sought in 1919 was in connection with proposed loans to foreign governments for purposes of reconstruction and rehabilitation, and since the legislation was denied the loans were never made. He added that the Liberty loan acts, under which the loans were made, gave authority to make them for the purpose of providing for the national security and defense, and although the armistice had been declared, war was not terminated until the signing of the treaty of peace with Germany.

6 BOYS, WOMAN SEIZED AS BAND OF PETTY THIEVES

Six youths and a woman were held last night by Albany Park police in connection with numerous window breaking jobs on the northwest side, involving minor thefts.

They are Frank Jonowski, 17 years old, 1115 North Kedzie avenue; Paul Rosstad, 19, of 2936 North Talman avenue; Rex Carzoli, 22, and Louis Carzoli, 17, both of 2127 Chicago avenue; George Eabia, 21, of 2424 Augusta street; Herman Becker, 22, 2640 Hirsch street, and Mrs. Josephine Weleos, 43, of 2649 Walton street.

Janowski and Rosstad were arrested Saturday by Policemen Edward Lowing and John Rush. With Capt. Joseph Goldberg they questioned the boys and obtained the names of the other four youths and Mrs. Weleos. Police said the youths admitted smashing windows and taking the loot to Mrs. Weleos.

The New Alkaline Way to Treat COLDS!

There is always a BEST way to do anything, and here is the best way to treat a cold. At the first "sneeze" — step into the nearest drug store and get a package of ALKA-SELTZER Tablets. (Use the coupon below and get a 25 cent package for only 10 cents) Then and there take one or two tablets in a glass of water. They make a pleasing effervescent drink. Follow the directions on page 9 of the little booklet that comes in each package, and you too, will say that this new Alkaline way is the BEST way to treat a cold you have ever tried.

Try This New Alkaline Way

ALKA-SELTZER is an entirely new method for the relief and treatment of Colds, also headache, sour stomach, indigestion, gas on stomach, rheumatic, neuritic and everyday aches and pains. It supplies what Health Authorities now call the "Alkaline reserve" — so necessary to a healthy condition of the stomach and body. Much of the activity in the body produces acids. Most of us eat too many acid-forming foods. Our systems are usually in an excess acid condition, which makes us easy prey to colds, sour stomach, gas on stomach and many other common ailments.

Keep Up Your "Alkaline Reserve"

ALKA-SELTZER Tablets are a most effective way to rebuild the alkaline reserve in your body. They give DOUBLE relief. FIRST, they relieve the pain and stuffed-up feeling — then, they correct the EXCESS ACID condition that usually causes the trouble. A tablet of ALKA-SELTZER in a glass of water makes a sparkling anti-acid drink—a bubbling glassful of the alkaline minerals you need to build up the alkaline reserve and help put your system in a position to counteract colds, sore throat, headaches, sour stomach, indigestion, and most other everyday ailments.

Don't Neglect a Cold

It's dangerous. Attack it at the "first sneeze." Don't let it fasten its grip — fight it at the start with ALKA-SELTZER. Slow down — rest — go to bed for a day or so if you can — keep warm — cut out acid foods — and you will soon get rid of your cold. You'll like this new way to treat colds and other aches and pains. ALKA-SELTZER Tablets make a clear, sparkling, pleasant, anti-acid drink — harmless but effective and prompt in relief. You'll be delighted with them.

Be sure to use the coupon below and get your first package to try, for only 10 cents, at any drug store.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE VOICE OF AMERICAN BUSINESS.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States is submitting to its members for their approval a program of federal taxes and expenditures. The program was drafted by a committee headed by Mr. Fred Sargent of Chicago, president of the North Western railway. It is a program which, it may safely be assumed, will meet with almost unanimous support from business men. Any dissent will come from those who regard it as too lenient.

The emphasis in the report is on excessive expenditures. When the outlay has been brought down as far as it can be, the time will come to consider tax increases to balance the budget, it is argued. The deficit in the present fiscal year can be met by borrowing and should not be met by retroactive taxes applying to 1931 incomes. There will be only a small deficit next year if congress holds appropriations down, and there should be no deficit by 1934.

This program can be criticized as too gentle toward the taxeaters in congress and in the government departments and bureaus. The program assumes that the task of reducing outlay immediately is too heavy a one to impose upon government officials. No doubt the elimination of waste at once will be painful to the men who must vote reduced appropriations, but if any other policy is adopted congressmen will be proved to be not the representatives of the American people but their masters.

A genuine desire on the part of congress to retrench will take this form: the director of the budget will be instructed to make a 25 per cent reduction in outlay under the last appropriations. Presumably it was for some such purpose that the office of director of the budget was created. If the bureau of the budget ever had an opportunity to justify its existence, this is the time.

LESS INTERFERENCE, NOT MORE.

Proposals to bring motor transportation under the regulation of the I. C. C. and other proposals to impose upon that agency the regulation of shipping rates are astonishing examples of theorizing without reference to the facts, the most obvious facts. Among these is the inability of the commission to accomplish regulation of rates efficiently even within its present limits. As we have said before, if the present commission were ten times as large as it is and ten times as able it would still be unable to cope with the task of regulating the huge and complex rate structure of the railroads. The best it can do, with the best of intentions, is to deal with generalities, which necessarily fails to adjust rates to actual conditions and freezes the rate structure.

Thus regulation has strangled the healthy freedom which a great industry must enjoy if it is to be vital and progressive. Yet, in the face of its demonstrated harm, congress is asked to impose upon the regulating agencies new responsibilities and expand an already hurtful interference to other forms of transport.

A clarification of the whole problem of transportation is urgently needed. The railroads are the backbone of our system of transport. They should be freed from the trammels of regulation which is not and cannot be related to the complex conditions of the continent, which deplete their resources, interfere with healthy initiative, and which make for an inefficiency injurious to the shipper and consumer as well as to the railroads. The coming of new forms of transportation should not be permitted to destroy the railroads' service, nor should the public be deprived of the benefits to be derived from new forms of transportation. What is needed is coördination with the railroad as the base of a structure which includes all modern means of transport—on the water, by motor, in the air.

In this comprehensive development the railroads should have the right to own and operate watercraft, buses and trucks, and to meet competition in rates without application to the interstate commerce commission. They should be free to meet truck rates with less than carload rates and ship rates with train rates. Bus competition should be met by railroad management by increasing speed, the outstanding advantage the railroads possess, and which thus far they have failed to exploit.

The present condition of railroad investment and management is acute, but it has not yet resulted in a thorough and comprehensive grasp of the fundamentals. Railroad credit is in such a state that some emergency relief is required. But it will not reach the foundation of their need, which is not more credit and therefore more debts, but more traffic and more revenue. These cannot be got without relieving the railroads from improper restrictions or without the freedom and the will to meet competition and increase efficient service. Railroad management needs more imagination and resourcefulness, but it should be permitted and encouraged to develop them. This will benefit them permanently, and also the public. We are going far astray when we try to relieve the railroads of competition by putting new forms of transport in the shackles that have nearly ruined the railroads.

Our policy should be to make the utmost use of all forms of transport and to make possible the development of all agencies in a properly coordinated system, operating consistently for the maximum public benefit. The foolish rigidity of rail rates should not be extended to other transport, that of motors or intercoastal shipping, but removed from the railroads. Our transport needs more freedom for the maximum development of its service.

THE DRY VOTE IN THE SENATE.

Senator Bingham of Connecticut gave the senate a chance to vote on a futile resolution declaring that the honorable body would welcome any action taken by the states to initiate a popular vote on the repeal or modification of the eighteenth amendment or Volstead act. The drys pounced upon it, maneuvered it to a roll call and knocked it in the head with fifty-five nay to fifteen yea, giving the depressed prohibitionists a bit of cheer. Senator Bingham's associates thought he was misguided to precipitate a test on a question of so little meaning, but he did and took a defeat by a nearly four to one vote.

The fifteen senators who voted that they would welcome an expression of popular opinion, with three paired for it, represent 45,000,000 people of the United States. The fifty-five who voted against the resolution, with three paired against it, represent 70,000,000. This statement is to be qualified by the fact that Ohio and Maryland are represented in both totals, their senators dividing on the question. Maryland is the most nonconformist state in the Union. Senator Fess of Ohio voted dry, but his junior, Bulkley, who has come out of recent Ohio elections as an opponent of prohibition and is the expression of its current political opinion, voted for the resolution.

California and Michigan contributed 10,000,000 population to the side represented in the vote for prohibition. California is virtually out from under the Volstead act and the eighteenth amendment. Its grape industries, with the permission and financial support of the federal government, put intoxicating beverages in homes all over the country. Michigan is one of the chief portals for the entry of contraband liquor.

The hold the prohibition fanatics proved they still have upon the senate derives its strength from the south and from the rural states of the west which contribute senators and little else to the country's activities. The senators frequently are not to be regarded as contributions to the country's welfare. The hold is still there, but masses of the people are throwing themselves against it to break it, and changes in the membership or votes of congress will register the opinion against the prevailing but discredited experiment.

Editorial of the Day

PROHIBITION AND THE INCOME TAX.

[New York Evening Post.]

Prohibition, after yielding the first place in popular interest to the depression, is now pushing steadily back to something like its old importance. Hard times will and should be the main concern of the people throughout the presidential campaign. But prohibition, first as the greatest of our social evils, and, second, as a vitally important economic influence, must figure prominently in the election this fall.

"If we could change prohibition it would not be necessary to levy any of these proposed increased taxes [the Roosevelt and Mellon proposals], but we might do away entirely with our income tax."

This statement shows the immense economic and therefore political importance of prohibition in this particular crisis of our history. It is not made by any of the anti-prohibition associations. It comes from the lips of the greatest tax authority of America—Prof. Edwin R. A. Seligman of Columbia university.

Prof. Seligman discussed prohibition at the annual dinner of the Institute of Consulting Engineers at the Union League club last night.

A tax on distilled and fermented liquors, this great taxation expert said, would yield to the federal government some $1,280,000,000. In addition to this, he thought that the returns from state licenses would bring the total return up to $1,500,000,000.

Prof. Seligman thought that the license fees taken in this state today would amount to as high as $100,000,000 to $125,000,000. He went on:

"If we add all the other states, many of which did not have high licenses, it would be safe to say without fear of contradiction that if we had this system of liquor taxes and high licenses we would have a levy today of one and one half billion dollars, or three times as much as is expected from the personal income tax next year."

MONEY ACTS.

During an intense love scene in the movies when the hero was doing his stuff, wife nudged hubby and said: "Why is it that you never make love to me like that?" "Say," he replied, "do you know the salary that guy gets for doing that?"—Royal Arcanum Bulletin.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

SNOW IN CHICAGO! Yes, indeed! We had snow, real snow, in Chicago Saturday! What a delightful novelty! Children who have read about snow all their little lives, but never seen any, could hardly believe their eyes. Old folks who remember snow back in the years before the climate changed had to assure the children that the soft, fleecy stuff floating through the air like bits of feathers was really snow and would not hurt them. Then, of course, the youngsters wanted to build snow men and throw snowballs, but, naturally, in this climate the snow doesn't last long, and, as it melted soon after it touched the ground, the children could not have their snow men or snowballs. Snowballs are even more fun than snow men, but they are not as diverting as they used to be. Back in the days when men wore high silk hats in daytime was when a snowball gave the greatest joy to the happy children. A silk hat hit squarely amidships by a large, squashy snowball gave back the most delightful sound and bounced off into the air in a quaint manner that is really indescribable. Ah, those were the days of real sport. We are sorry our little ones were disappointed in their first snow, but we hope they will write out to their friends in southern California for full instructions on how to make snowballs and snow men and snow forts and things, so that if ever Chicago and the great midwest get a real snow that is content to remain on the ground for a few minutes they may enjoy it as much as the youngsters out in Loz Onglaize do their snowstorms. For snows are few and far between in Chicago and disappear very quickly. Ah, what a climate, what a climate! (Los Onglaize and southern California papers please copy.)

BALLAD TO DENNIS KING.

Jade and vagabond and pest
In crooked street and brothel bold,
Souls of sin and love distressed
Would have stolen blesséd gold
For kiss or sigh that brief endures
As proverb rose or broken heart
From your curving lip that lures
The rakish swagger of your art!

For head like yours upon their breasts,
Their motley love to hold,
Dames of Paris, east and west,
Would have stolen blesséd gold.
Villon would have stolen stars
From the roofs of dark Montmartre
To have flashed a trice of hours
The rakish swagger of your art!

Villon once as one possessed
Willing to his tattered wold
In testament that fame has blessed
Would have stolen blesséd gold
To have had to will his sœurs
A wink as sly, a wig as swart,
A way of turning smart as yours,

ENVOY.

Harlots, nuns, and ladies cold
Would have stolen blesséd gold,
Would have swooned from, as from dart,
The rakish swagger of your art!

THE FILIPINOS are out with a demand for absolute freedom. Fiddlesticks, Filipinos! We've got absolute freedom here in these United States of America. Absolute freedom. And suppose we take our absolute freedom in one hand and some small coin in the other and go out and try to buy a glass of real beer? Then what? We'll probably get a bullet hole in our rear tire and have to go to a hospital. Absolute freedom! Listen, Filipinos, as we used to say long ago, you don't know the half of it, dearie, you don't know the half!

"FOREIGN POWERS Warn Japanese to 'Be Careful.'"—The Trib. And in view of recent events in Manchuria we trust the foreign powers were judicious enough to use the entire phrase in their warning: "If you can't be good be careful."

THE SUPREME COURT of New York refuses incorporation papers to the "Jiggs Nut Club" on the ground that it was not dignified and would reflect shame upon the state. The court is all wet; the word "nut" in the club's name should have been tossed out not because it is undignified but because it is obsolete. We now say "nertz." Nowadays in our more cultured circles we do not say "You poor nut"; no, indeed; we say, "Aw, yer nertz."

BELIEVE IT OR NOT.

Some girls choose a funeral pyre,
Don their nicest clothes,
Burn up just like Dido did,
When a lover goes.

Others ride to Camelot
In a lily barge,
Dying to see Launcelot,
On a trumped-up charge.

Cleopatra chose an asp
When her love went stale—
Cinderella won her prince,
And that's a fairy tale!

CALIFORNIA CELEBRATED Saturday the eighty-fourth anniversary of the discovery of gold on the coast. Can't see why California or the U. S. A. should do any celebrating over gold. France has got it all.

WITH ALL the tons of propaganda, circular letters, pictures, and millions of columns of stuff in the newspapers about him already, what in the world will there be left to say or do when George's birthday comes around on the 22d of February? HOW TYPHOID MAY SPREAD.

A RECENT Porto Rican experience shows again how rapidly pollution can travel through the soil. Drs. Garrido-Morales and Costa Maudry report a small outbreak of typhoid fever which occurred in Guayama, Porto Rico.

The disease began to develop in a family. Presently, it was distributed throughout a neighborhood. In warm climates typhoid does not cause a fever that continues all day and night for a matter of weeks, as is the case in colder countries, but it has a tendency to go off and come on again as is the case with malaria. However, in this instance, various laboratory tests proved that these were cases of typhoid and that none of them had malaria.

The question was: Where was the disease coming from and how could it be stopped? An underground concrete cistern came under suspicion. The water in this cistern was rain collected from the roofs. It tasted good and it should have been pure, but the evidence pointed toward the cistern and its contents.

The doctors had the cistern emptied. No rats or floaters were found, but a foot or two above the floor, and several feet below the surface of the ground, there was a crack in the cistern wall. The gutters had been disconnected and the job of searching was postponed until daylight returned. The next morning it was found that an inch of water had leaked in through the crack in the wall. Plainly, the people who drank from this cistern had been getting something besides rain water. The sleuths looked about. A few feet away they saw a yard privy.

They poured a watery solution of a blue dye into this privy and then returned to the cistern and placed some blotting paper at the crack. In twenty minutes the blotting paper was turning blue. In a few hours the water in the cistern was blue.

This is a record for speed of transmission which exceeds one that I observed several years ago, and about which I have written and spoken. In that case some men had built shacks just outside of a rapidly growing city. The water came from shallow wells dug in the sand close to one of the houses. In the early morning the man of the house would get up, slip on his clothing, and step out into the bracing fresh air. He would relieve himself of kidney excretion and then stand around a while taking deep breaths of the pure ozone as he listened to the birds and watched the unfolding day. After a bit he would pump some water into a pan, set the pan on a shelf, and wash and brush his teeth.

But, alas! Analyses of the water showed that while he breathed the good air and enjoyed the scenery, the kidney excretion had raced to the well. When he was ready to wash it had already reached its goal. Another case of the hare and the tortoise, as developed by Mr. Aesop.

PERITONITIS.

Mrs. D. S. writes: Please inform me how peritonitis develops. Is it only after an operation? Can one suffer an acute attack of it alone, and is it always fatal?

REPLY.

What we ordinarily call peritonitis is the result of an infection. In the long ago it was called inflammation of the bowels. The infection may extend to the peritoneum from any one of several foci. It frequently follows childbirth, extending from the pelvic organs. Appendicitis is another frequent cause. Infection of the gall bladder is a third. There are several others, including infections for which operation was done and infections that occur during operation. It is often fatal, but not usually so.

EYE BLINKING.

Mrs. F. S. D. writes: Your article on eye blinking was read with great interest. Here's a tip for parents:

We have a boy 10 years old who gets a great kick out of mimicking his uncle after each visit by blinking his eyes. I have watched him sit and observe these habits of his uncle, and sure enough the son has it down to a T the next day.

Denying them spending money or anything else they may have their hearts set on works wonders, we have found.

GET SELF-CONTROL.

T. M. writes: I have a terrible craving for pastries of all kinds, and I don't know what to do about it. It is just like one who drinks or takes dope, and just can't stop. I'll eat until I am sick, and when I am well again I crave these sweets just as much as before.

REPLY.

What can I say? Why tell you that you must develop character and self-control when you know that but cannot come across with it? Shall I tell you to employ a caretaker and have him feed you out of a spoon? What good would that do?

IT IS CURABLE.

J. C. writes: Is consumption curable?

REPLY.

CONSULT STATE'S ATTORNEY.

Chicago, Jan. 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—If I discover that my husband has been going with a young woman for some time, has been out of the state with her, and that she is known to some people as his wife [1], can I do anything to her legally? 2. If she telephones my home and tells me things, can I prosecute her? 3. If she starts legal proceedings against my husband what can she really do to him? 4. On the Mann act charge, would she be subject to punishment? I don't want a divorce.

D. M. R.

1. Yes. If you wish to prosecute you should take the matter up with the state's attorney.
2. As far as your question relates to her telling you things, we cannot advise without knowing what she tells you.
3. Depends on additional facts.
4. In our opinion she is technically liable.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

GARBAGE COLLECTION.

Chicago, Jan. 17.—[Friend of the People.]—Is it permissible for people to throw garbage and cans on vacant property? I have two small boys and purchased my home two months ago thinking they would have a yard to play in, but people on both sides of the alley think that the vacant lot next to my home is a public dumping ground. Why is it we cannot have a garbage wagon out here at least once a week? E. S.

This district is in an outlying section of the city where it is impossible to give weekly service with the limited funds at our command. Furthermore, our forces are now working on a four day a week basis. This district is now in good condition, as it has recently been given a thorough cleaning. A survey was also made and notices served on householders to stop further dumping and to provide regulation containers for the accommodation of refuse output.

PAWNED ARTICLES.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Two months ago I pawned a ring. I received a ticket for it. Three weeks ago I lost the ticket. I'd like to get my ring back, but I don't know what to do. I don't remember the number on it. Can I go and claim the ring? If not, what can I do to get it back? They have a duplicate check with my name on it.

M. K.

We would suggest that you first report the facts to the pawnbroker and see what he says. It may be that no difficulty will develop.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

This nation has had other serious financial depressions, as the following excerpts from The Tribune files reveal. Each of these periods of hard times has been followed by periods of great prosperity.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 1.—The affairs of the Spragues are the absorbing topic in business centers. The suspension of the Cranston bank will cause much suffering among depositors, many of whom are operators in the Sprague industries. Mortgaging of all the Sprague property is regarded by prominent manufacturers as the only thing that can save the immense business of the company.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 31.—The three months' campaign for the unconditional repeal of the silver purchase act is practically ended. The senate passed the Voorhees unconditional repeal bill by a vote of 43 to 32. For the bill were 23 Republicans and 20 Democrats. Against it were 9 Republicans, 19 Democrats, and 4 Populists. Ten senators were paired. The bill now goes to the house for concurrence in the measure, which is practically the same as that passed by the house last August. The bill provides that part of the act of 1890 directing the purchase from "time to time of silver bullion to the aggregate amount of 4,500,000 ounces, or so much thereof as may be offered, in each month, at the market price thereof, not exceeding $1 for 371¼ grains of pure silver" be repealed. It is expected that this action will go far toward ending the business depression.

New York, April 1.—January railroad earnings, as compiled by the New York Financial Chronicle, show an estimated falling off in gross of $25,000,000 compared with 1907. This is at the rate of $300,000,000 a year.

1921.

Chicago, April 5.—Some indication of the extent to which business has suffered from falling prices and stagnation in the last nine months, and also of the fact that readjustment still may have some distance to go, is contained in the record of failures of recent months. Statistics compiled by R. G. Dun & Co. show 4,870 failures occurred in the first 3 months of 1921 as compared with 1,627 during the first three months of 1920 and 2,498 during the last three months of 1920.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JANUARY 25, 1916.

BERLIN.—Austro-Hungarian troops have occupied the important Albanian town of Scutari, according to an official announcement by the Austro-Hungarian headquarters. The Montenegrin and Serbian troops which have occupied the town since June retired to the south without resistance.

LONDON.—The Austrian occupation appears to confirm previous statements that no negotiations are proceeding between Austria and Montenegro, as, according to the reports concerning the original Austrian offers of peace, it was understood that the Montenegrins were to hold Scutari as compensation for Austria's occupation of Mount Lovcen.

PARIS.—Indications that the Germans are attempting to break the allied lines in Belgium and launch a new drive toward Calais are given in the official statement which tells of a terrific artillery attack near Nieuport. Efforts of the infantry to follow with a dash on the allied positions were stopped by the curtain of fire. An earlier statement tells of a new long range bombardment of Nancy. The projectiles reached the city.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A fist fight between George von L. Meyer, former secretary of the navy, and Truxton Beale, brother-in-law of the Russian ambassador, was the prelude of a preparedness for war luncheon given by Capt. Henry Ward at the Metropolitan club. Both combatants are ardent advocates of preparedness for defense, personally and nationally. The fight took place in front of the Metropolitan club early in the afternoon. One word led to another until Mr. Beale challenged the ex-secretary to step outside and settle it. The fight had not gone far when Capt. Templin M. Potts rushed between the men and separated them.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

JANUARY 25, 1902.

OSKALOOSA, Ia.—Fifty men were killed in an explosion in the Lost Creek coal mines, ten miles southeast of here. Thirty-eight bodies are in the temporary morgue.

CHICAGO.—This city will welcome Rear Admiral Schley today with all the fervor that is capable of expression in words and action. The commander of the fleet which destroyed the Spanish warships at Santiago—the gallant officer whose service for his country has extended for more than forty years—will find that a large proportion of Chicago's 2,000,000 residents are determined to see and cheer him during his three days' visit to the city.

UNDERTAKERS, ETC.

Chicago, Jan. 21.—The editorial deploring the use of the word "mortician" which appears in today's issue of your paper, while it suggests no substitute, does point out the need of a less unpleasant title, and it is to be hoped that in the selection of a substitute it will not be necessary to filch a word that properly belongs in the usage of some other calling, as was done with the previous title "undertaker." That word should have been left the property of the legal profession, and its loss is still felt, as the common substitute for it, "contractor," is far too limited in meaning.

And, since you bring up the matter of words, would it not be well if your paper would overcome its fondness for the word "rapist"—if there is such a word? Used as you frequently use it, it can only imply proficiency (see pianist, stylist, balloonist, etc.), and surely you are not suggesting the existence of a fine art. Take the similar word "reap." While some reapers may be more skillful than others, even Death, the great reaper, would not be called a "reapist."

E. H. BANGS.

FUNERAL DIRECTORS.

Chicago, Jan. 21.—Your editorial, "No More Morticians," was quite laughable. The livery union is trying to dictate as to how people should ride to funerals, and THE TRIBUNE is endeavoring to tell the funeral directors they should be called undertakers instead of morticians.

The meaning of the word undertaker is one who undertakes. It in no way describes one who manages funerals. The word "mortician" is far superior in meaning as it describes one who cares for the dead. However, if you personally dislike the word "mortician" why don't you use the title funeral drector? No one likes the words "undertaker" and "coffin," which are not being used by modern journalists.

Now, Mr. Rip Van Winkle, I suggest that before you decide to rule the funeral industry you consult either the National Funeral Directors' association, the National Selected Morticians, or the University of Minnesota school of mortuary science.

R. L. F.

BOY, ANOTHER BOLT OF CREPE.

Charleston, Ill., Jan. 21.—Now that the editor has wisely used his power in the interest of good taste and has banished that dreadful word (see editorial page, column 2, Thursday, Jan. 21), I wish he would strike out the word "co-ed," a relic of the early '80s, much loved by young reporters, in the sense of student, when the context plainly shows that a woman student is meant: "Miss Mary Smith, a co-ed at the University of Illinois."

E. A. F.

"AND WHEN WE DIE—"

Manteno, Ill., Jan. 21.—Just three minutes since we heard over the air of your stand on the word "mortician." Atta' boy! And we sincerely hope that it may not bring about any neglect of their remains when the last call shall have come to those of the management responsible for this action.

GEORGE BECKWITH.

TULIPS.

Goshen, Ind., Jan. 7.—I went out in my yard this morning (after the thermometer had reached 58 degrees here the day before), looking for tulips, and, sure enough, there were two up, at least two inches out of the ground and many more just peeping through the leaves covering them.

MRS. HOMER MARSHALL.

YOU SHOULD SEE OUR ORANGE TREE.

EDGAR B. YOUNG.

UNEMPLOYED PRECINCT CAPTAINS.

Chicago, Jan. 19.—Isn't it about time we unemployed Republican precinct captains are waking up? The Republican central county committee of Cook county met this week for slate making on a so called harmony ticket and without accomplishing anything they adjourned. There never will be any harmony among our so called leaders. But what they will do will be eventually to make up a slate of different candidates and then the different factions will proceed to knife them on primary day.

Now out of 3,000 Republican precinct captains in Cook county there are about 2,200 who have been out of employment for over a year and will be out for another year, for there are no positions at present except for some of the ward committeemen and their in-laws, and I dare say that not a Republican candidate will be elected this fall from the so-called harmony slate in Cook county.

So if the unemployed Republican precinct captains of Cook county would hold a meeting and make up their own slate from their own ranks, get their petitions signed and have them filed and placed on the ticket, they would have the same chance of being nominated as any candidate backed by the so called harmony slate. And even if our candidates do not win, we have nothing to lose, everything to gain, besides gaining some prestige and also making some of our so called leaders sit up and take notice.

And don't imagine that some of us are not qualified to be elected to these offices, for some of us are better qualified than the candidates that will be picked by the county central committee.

REPUBLICAN PRECINCT CAPTAIN.

A SPORTSMAN'S THANKS.

Oconomowoc, Wis., Jan. 13.—I want to take this opportunity to express my appreciation of the very fine support that you gave us in putting on our ski tournament. It enabled us to draw a much larger crowd than ever before and should help us make it possible to bring the central championships to Oconomowoc next winter. You will be glad to know, I am sure, that the Oconomowoc Ski club made out quite well financially, which, of course, is essential in promoting further activity in the ski sport. The club feels deeply indebted to you for your kind coöperation and we wish to extend our sincere thanks.

RUDOLF PABST,
President Oconomowoc Ski Club.

FROM A SOLDIER OF THE LEGION.

SIVI-BEL-ABBES, Algeria, Dec. 31.—I have the honor to address you this letter to thank you for the kindness of inserting my little letter on Nov. 4. The result was surprising. I got over one thousand replies. Even if it would have been my greatest pleasure to answer them all, it was really impossible to do so, our day's pay not allowing such an expense. I thank all the people who wrote me. I will keep their letters and await a chance to give them a reply.

JACK STONE.

AMERICA FIRST.

Mansfield, Ill., Jan. 17.—Allow me to express my appreciation of your editorial, "War Debts and Cancellation," in today's TRIBUNE. In this day and age, when so many are affected with internationalism, it is more than refreshing to have one great newspaper point out the truth and take a stand for U. S. A. first. Yours truly,

ROBERT M. WALKER, Ex-A. E. F.

ALMOST RUN OVER.

Chicago, Jan. 22.—I noticed an article in today's TRIBUNE regarding an Austin Dairy company truck. About a year ago their truck No. 14 shot out of an alley in the same vicinity and almost ran over me while I was wheeling the baby. At the time I wrote several letters to the company, but never received a reply.

RIGHT now it will pay you well to take a careful look at the new motor cars offered for 1932.

In a dozen ways they make plain why they have aroused more talk and interest than any cars in recent years.

And threading through all the comment about these stunning new models you hear two words again and again.

These two words are "safety" and "silence."

Safety—in lower center of gravity, better balance, better control, better brakes.

And here is the first Silent Non-Skid Tire

Because safety and silence have become the mark of the modern motor car you will find an impressive number of 1932 models on a most remarkable new tire.

Up to now there has been only one way to make a tire silent, and that was to sacrifice safety and traction by putting "sled-runner" ribs in the center of the tread.

This newest Goodyear keeps all the safe-gripping traction right in the center of its famed All-Weather Tread design—yet still banishes vibration—does away with noise by shifting a fraction of an inch of rubber.

It gives you silence plus safety.

You simply don't know what smooth-riding silent-rolling comfort and quick-stopping safety are, until you try one of the new cars on a set of these quiet, sure-footed Goodyears.

So take the wheel of any one of the 1932 cars shod with the Silent All-Weather—and give yourself a brand new thrill from driving!

Safety with Silence

Non-skid treads are vital to safety, and the new Goodyear Silent All-Weather gives you that safety, yet ends all noise and vibration by the shifting of a fraction of an inch of rubber in the husky blocks of the design, so that blocks of the same size never follow each other. The result is the quietest, smoothest-running non-skid tread that ever gripped a highway

LAST YEAR'S WIFE

By ALICE M. WILLIAMSON

INSTALLMENT XIX.

LOVE AND JOY COMING BACK.

"Does the duke love you now?" asked Lorne.

"I'm positive he does," Dolores assured her eagerly. "He couldn't have loved that woman. Once he told me that I was 'in his blood.'"

"Dick told me that about you, too," said Lorne. "Men are so alike! Isn't it funny? But Dick seems to have got you thoroughly out of his blood in one year. The duke has had nine or ten years to do it in. Perhaps he has done it!"

"Dick had loved you," Dolores was quick to argue. "Tom has never really loved any one but me. That makes a great difference. Besides, I saw him in London. I made him practically confess that he'd never stopped caring and that he'd had sleepless nights after I married Dick. But then," Dolores added, "he seemed to have a fit of repentance because he'd spoken of love to me when his wife was hardly cold in her grave. He said that in a letter answering one of mine which I sent him. So he left England and came all the way out here as a tourist named Thomas Shield to try and forget."

"A case of 'Get thee behind me, Satan'!" remarked Lorne. "But Satan didn't stay far behind. Quite a romance! Only the end's not in sight yet. It may be a happy end; it may be a sad one—for you, I mean."

"It won't be sad if I can see Tom soon, and say, not only have I always loved him at heart, but that Dick has betrayed me for you, and I can easily get a divorce," Dolores urged breathlessly. "Lorne, we're talking to each other as woman to woman."

"As cat to cat. That's more like it," said Lorne. "What you mean is, you've followed the duke, knowing him well enough to know that if you strike while the iron's hot——"

"Yes, yes, if you will have it so, that's it!" the duchess exclaimed impatiently. "Tom cools with waiting. He's weak in some ways. You have to settle things with him and then go ahead. Lorne, you love Dick; you're a movie star; a spice of scandal only does you good. You vamp him back from me and I'll rush to Reno and get a divorce. Dick'll be free again."

"I have already vamped him back from you," said Lorne. "That part's all right, but there's no need for you to rush to Reno to get a divorce. You're not—er—wouldn't be legally married to Dick in Nevada nor in California. And especially not in England. Nor all over Europe."

Dolores screamed. She grew white, then red. She lifted her hand as if to strike Lorne, but dropped it helplessly.

"You wicked creature! What do you mean by insulting me so?" She choked on the words.

"So sorry! I modify the statement," Lorne apologized. "Of course, you're married to Dick—in Mexico. At least, I think so. Though it was an absentee divorce, and there's being trouble about them. It wasn't my affair when Dick told me you were in such a hurry you'd be satisfied with a Mexican divorce without my going there to get it. I've never felt divorced from him at heart, which was a great comfort. I was trying always to improve myself so he could be proud of me when you and he tired of playing at marriage. I didn't worry to go into Mexico—not even to that gorgeous Agua Caliente for a week-end, as everybody else does. You can marry your duke tomorrow if he'll have you. Only you, too, must stay out of Mexico or you might get called a bigamist—in the Mexican newspapers."

"I think you're a fiend," said Dolores.

"Well, anyhow, here is tea," announced Lorne. "I began to think Filipina must have fainted in it. Do you like it weak or strong?"

It was the duchess who showed signs of fainting; but Lorne forced tea upon her and, though Spanish in blood, Dolores had lived so long in England that tea could never quite fail. And, besides, when the truth was out Lorne became somewhat kinder. She became almost comforting and quite human. She reassured the duchess.

"I'm not blackmailing you," she said. "I don't want revenge. I've really felt thankful to you because you were in a hurry and pleased with the Mexican absentee divorce. I always had the consolation of knowing that I was Dick's wife—out of Mexico. I simply waited for him. I expected him to come back, though not so soon. I dared not hope that. You see, I couldn't count then upon the duke. Ask any lawyer if I'm not right. No Mexican divorce is legal out of Mexico, if it is disputed, especially an absentee divorce; not that I would have disputed it. And I shall never bring it up as an issue. I'm only telling you. Save your face and the duke's face and Dick's face [never mind mine!] by divorcing Dick in Mexico. I'll give you all the dope about it and recommend a lawyer, and you can take the duke into your confidence or not. If I were in your place I would. You'd become an object of sympathy to him and I'd be the designing woman in his eyes."

"I think," said Dolores slowly, "that that may be a very good tip. Chivalry's an old fashioned virtue, but Tom is rich in it."

"As in everything else," added Lorne. "If you want to do the thing thoroughly spend a month in Mexico and you'll be the most divorced alien that country ever saw."

"Introduce me to your lawyer and I'll start tomorrow!" exclaimed Dolores. "That is, I will if I can see Tom first."

"Telephone to him, why don't you," Lorne advised, "as soon as you get back to your hotel? Tell him what a fiend I am and what a victim you are. That's the line of talk."

"I will," promised Dolores. "And I suppose you will telephone to Dick?"

"You suppose wrong," Lorne answered. "I will not telephone to Dick. I have waited two years for Dick. Today I thought I had lost him forever. But now that I know differently I can wait a little longer."

Dolores looked at her with narrowed eyes. "You are very sure of him!" she exclaimed.

"Yes, I have been sure since the first till I had a few bad hours this morning," the girl confessed. "Once in a while the inferiority complex was on me, heavy and black, but that wasn't often. I lived through the years. Go now and have it out with Dick at the Ambassador; then move somewhere else, say to the Biltmore——"

"Tom's at the Biltmore!"

"O, well, suit yourself as to the hotel. There are plenty of good ones."

Dolores was on her feet, flushed and feverish. "I don't know whether to thank you or hate you!" she said. "But I'll send Dick to you, anyhow."

"Don't," Lorne commanded. "I'd rather you didn't. I don't want him to come through you. Dick will be here in good time without sending. One good Mexican divorce deserves another! He'll turn up and propose to me when he feels free to do it, not before. And that is all right with me."

"You are a very strange girl," said Dolores.

"So I've often been told," Lorne admitted. "I'll ring for Filipina to show you out. Good-by. So nice to have seen you again."

. . . . . .

When the duchess' hired motor car had whirled her away Lorne ran upstairs as far as the landing. She straightened the Persian rug, which was already straight as straight could be.

"Tic-tac, tic-tac," said the old clock which had been Lorne's friend through two bleak years of loneliness. "Tic-tac, tic-tac, love and joy, coming back."

Chevalier Grin, His Songs, Too, Cheer Society

While Also Helping Funds for the Jobless.

THE Joint Emergency Relief fund, for which society has given benefit after benefit this winter, will share equally with the "Société Francaise de Bienfaisance de l'Illinois" the proceeds from yesterday's French-American benefit given by Maurice Chevalier at the Erlanger theater, and although it is not known yet exactly what will be contributed to both, we do know that the benefit was a great success from the standpoint of every one having a grand time and enjoying the "smiling lieutenant" immensely.

His debonair manner, wide smile and delightful manner of singing French—and American—songs are well known to the vast moving picture audience in this country, but it was fun to see him "in the flesh," as he expressed it. We are sure every one left the theater feeling that the entertainmnt had been well worth the price.

There were many French people in the theater, most of them in the balcony and gallery and so of course the French songs and humor drew more laughter from that part of the house, and songs in English were more appreciated by the occupants of the main floor. Not that most of our "best people" don't speak French, but that it is a bit difficult to get all the subtleties of a foreign language unless one is a very excellent linguist.

Every one was there, young and old, including the members of the committee, Ira Nelson Morris, whose idea it was to give the benefit we understand; Henry Bougearel, acting French consul; Robert Coube, chairman of the "Comité Central" of the French and French-American Societies of Chicago; Mrs. Francis Johnson, Mrs. Walter B. Wolf, Mrs. Augustus W. Eddy, and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, the four leading spirits in the women's committee, Arthur Meeker Jr., Miss Alice Roullier, Mme. Vanni-Marcoux, Thornton Wilder, President and Mrs. Robert M. Hutchins, Mr. and Mrs. Barrett Wendell, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, the James Minottos (we heard they had returned to their ranch in Arizona but they haven't), the Huntington Henrys, Mrs. Waller Borden, Russell Tyson, Frank McNair, Mrs. Lobdell Atwater, the Alden Swifts, the Kellogg Fairbanks, Mr. and Mrs. "Gus" Swift, Mr. and Mrs. I. Newton Perry, the Arthur G. Cables, and the James B. Forgans were some of those on the main floor. Also the John Seniors, Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Alphonse Campion, Dr. Elzear LaMothe, Mme. Henri Hiltz, Leon Hermant, Mlle. Dorcas Perrenoud, the Potter Palmers, Arthur Allais, Mrs. Morris L. Johnston, the "Jimmy" Ameses, Robert Hall McCormick, the Warren Fairbanks, the Edward L. Ryersons, and Joseph T. Ryerson, Mrs. Dudley Root and little Miss Denyse Root.

Eleanor McCormick, Barbara Wendell, Geraldine Swift, Caroline Smith, and Constance Hasler were among the girls giving leap year parties in the balcony, and the Walter Brewsters and their son-in-law and daughter, the Duncan Hodges, were in a box.

Tyrant Mother Drives This Desperate Girl to Leave Her Home

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"And people wonder why girls leave home!"

That's what "Bettikins" postscripts. She should have so headlined her plaint.

Mothers, this is for you! Those female parents of you who try to keep your grown children tied to your apron strings until you make a complete botch of their lives. But let "Bettikins" tell it:

"I am nearly 23, considered good looking, a good sport and not hard to get along with. Am employed as private secretary to an executive of a large company. I am an only child. My father died over a year ago and I am living with mother.

"We have our home, car, etc. Still, I am not by any means happy. There is nothing I can do without first consulting my mother. If I go out I can be sure of a scolding when I come home. It is getting so I hate to come home. My salary is all planned—by mother—how it is to be spent and where. I can do nothing of my own free will.

"Mother scolds me regardless of who is present. If I have a date with some one, she scolds him or else completely ignores him. If I say anything, I can be sure of getting hail Columbia. Because I want to go out with boys and girls of my own age I am all wrong.

"I take mother out on dates with me. When I don't she says I am ashamed of her and makes all kind of sarcastic remarks. I've stood it for so long, I cannot stand any more. I am thinking of leaving home and going by myself where, at least, I will have peace and not be nagged to death."

If you lock the doors and nail down the windows, youth still will find its mode of escape. You cannot stifle the perfectly normal urge for companionship. But why should there be locked doors and nailed down windows? Why should a mother feel that she should be a party to her young daughter's festivities? Why shouldn't the girl be encouraged to bring her friends home? Why shouldn't they be entertained there in a wholly welcome manner by mother?

And why shouldn't a girl of 23 want to escape from the stifling atmosphere of a tyrannic mater who has built no resources within herself for those years when Nature urges youth to look to its own kind for companionship?

How important is the control of the oven temperature in getting successful baked products?

It is all-important.

In cake baking, for instance, if the oven is too hot a crust will form over the top of the cake before it has risen sufficiently. Consequently the cake cannot rise properly, even though the gas is still forming and expanding, until the interior pressure is great enough to break the crust. When this happens and the batter oozes through the cracks, the finished product will have large ugly ridges and an uneven surface.

If, on the other hand, the oven is not hot enough, "the walls of the gas pockets apparently do not stiffen in time to prevent their being stretched beyond their holding capacity, with the result that they break and the cake is very coarse and tends to shrink."

The problem, then, is to get and maintain the proper temperature, whatever that may be. It will vary with the ingredients used.

An oven regulator is the easiest and most dependable solution to this problem. And an oven thermometer is the next best choice. The use of the thermometer does not provide an automatic control of the heat as does the regulator. It does, however, help the user to control the temperature. A glass door in the oven will be a great aid to the inexperienced.

Without either of these scientific appliances at your disposal, getting and maintaining the proper temperature will have to be a matter of guesswork.

If you're a good guesser you're fortunate.

TWO EGG ANGEL FOOD.

1 cup milk
1 cup flour
1 cup sugar
3 tsp. baking powder
2 egg whites
1 tsp. vanilla

Scald the milk. Sift together the flour, sugar, and baking powder three or four times. Pour the hot milk over the dry ingredients and beat for one minute. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites, but do not beat. Add the vanilla and bake in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) just as you do angel food cake.

The main differences in the two kinds of angel food are the number of eggs and the presence of baking powder in one. Regular angel food requires no baking powder.

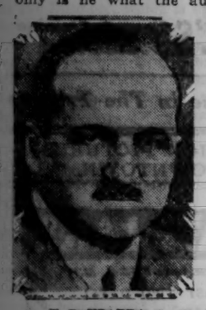
Easy to Read Hindenburg, Author Asserts

Finds Solid Loyalty in German Leader.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Hindenburg," by T. R. Ybarra [Duffield & Green]. Published today.

HINDENBURG was a legend during the war. Hindenburg is a legend today. An incredible figure of history. The result of one of Fate's most jesting tricks. Not only is he what the author of this popular biography calls him, "The Man with Three Lives," but he is one of the "imponderables" that Bismarck was fond of mentioning—"a factor of undeterminable value and potency which frequently upsets the most careful calculations of statesmen."



T. R. YBARRA.

Mr Ybarra calls attention to Bismarck's famous phrase and explains why, in his opinion—as an observer of the actual scene and a student of the life of Hindenburg—the iron man of today is not one of the indeterminable factors which the iron man of yesterday meant. For, says Mr. Ybarra, the main reason why students of his career find it such a formidable problem to reconcile the post-war Hindenburg with the pre-war Hindenburg is that they never have had the key to him in their hand. They have persistently assumed complexity where there was nothing but simplicity; they have used a microscope when all that was needed was the naked eye.

"Hindenburg is all of one piece; his every act is consistent with this uniformity," Ybarra writes. "It is a mistake to think of Hindenburg as a monarchist turned republican. . . . Hindenburg the monarchist has not become Hindenburg the republican. Instead, Hindenburg the patriot has decided—since he puts Germany even above loyalty to an emperor—that the patriotic way to serve Germany, now that she has become transformed into a republic, is by placing himself unreservedly at the disposal of that republic. With him it is purely a matter of conscience."

But however Mr. Ybarra explains the situation, it is an ironic one that "War Criminal Number Two," so designated by the conquering nations just after the war, should be transformed thirteen years later into the most honored of all Germans at home and abroad, and be gravely receiving as president of the German republic the premier and foreign minister of a nation which had been foremost in demanding that he be delivered up for trial.

Hindenburg, according to Mr. Ybarra, is not a great man. "Many students of European affairs, carefully estimating the value and potency of Hindenburg's qualities, have concluded that he cannot, by any stretch of the imagination, be considered a great man," he writes. "Whereupon Hindenburg, by hook or by crook, manages to achieve things which [calculations clearly indicate] are possible only to men endowed with greatness."

Hindenburg has, or has had since the beginning of the war, since the battle of Tannenberg, when he drove the Russians from what looked like imminent capture of his country, a tremendous hold upon the German people as a person. Other men have done as much—more, perhaps—for Germany. Hindenburg was not wholly in the right at all times in the conduct of the war, nor in his revolt against the higher command, but he captured the popular fancy once and forever, the author shows. To this day crowds stand for hours outside his house waiting for a glimpse of him, and never during the whole span of years since the Tannenberg victory has the mass of the German people felt differently about him.

It was not always thus with Hindenburg, however. When the news of the Tannenberg victory reached Germany and the country went mad over the leader who had made it possible, the city of Hanover, where he had lived most of his lifetime, was filled with astonished citizens who asked where this great man had been all of their lives, that they had never even heard that he lived in the community.

For life was over for Hindenburg when the war broke out, the author tells us. He had settled down to an old age of hunting and family life. He had lived the customary life of a military junker and he expected to die in a calm retirement. It was then for the first time that fate laughed at him, Mr. Ybarra says. Laughed at him and made him eventually leader of the entire German army. And when, a second time, he had settled down to a calm, much older age, Fate again laughed up its sleeve and in the face of his wishes.

There is a story about that first giggle of Fate which is amusing. When war was declared Hindenburg, at the age of 67, who had had theories about that East Prussian front for many years and had conceived a plan of action, wrote a letter offering his services, but, as was true in the case of Gen. Grant at the outbreak of the civil war, the letter was not even answered!

On the 22d of August Hindenburg strode down to the business section to do a little shopping.

"Shall I send the package to your home?" said one of the shopkeepers.

"Yes," said Hindenburg, "or rather no. I might as well carry it. You see" he growled, "I have nothing else to do. They don't want me. I'm not needed in this war."

When he reached home there was a telegram from imperial headquarters. Five days later, hundreds of miles east of Hanover, he was victor at that colossal trap known as the battle of Tannenburg.

By Mae Tinée.

Good morning!

Want to laugh? Hop over to the Oriental.

"High Pressure" was adapted from the stage play "Hot Money," and it abounds in action and comedy. The dialogue is amusing, and director and players have worked together with a skill and good will that make their finished work worth while.

Mr. Powell is discovered as a promoter—though you'd never think he could put anything across when you first lay eyes on him, for he's been on a bender and resembles something that sits outside the temple gates in India. A Turkish bath remedies all that, however, and there he is, just zipping with what makes men and women go buy buy and what has kept his sweetie true and adoring for five disillusioning years. (Fine actor—as always—Mr. William Powell! And what a sales talk he can deliver!)

Gar Evans is the name. Gar has a backer, "Colonel" Ginsberg. He has a right hand man called Mike. He has a dummy president who fronts for all his schemes—and he has his Francine, winsomely played by Evelyn Brent. He's superstitious about Francine. Can't do a thing when she's mad at him. George Sidney, Frank McHugh and George Kibbee play the leading male rôles in fine style.

The proposition Gar sets out to promote in this story is the making of artificial rubber out of—sewage! Ginsberg has bought a formula from a gentleman he later has a hard time locating, and Mike, learning of Ginsburg's buy, freezes on to the plump Hebraw gentleman, feeling that here is one more world for the boss to conquer.

All goes swimmingly until other rubber companies, public minded citizens and the police become nervous. Then?—and then—and THEN....!

If you don't get some fun out of "High Pressure" I'll be surprised at you.

See you tomorrow!

Sacred Heart Center Dedicated to Work of Social Service

Dedication of the Sacred Heart center at 824 West 19th street by the Rt. Rev. Bernard J. Sheil, auxiliary bishop of Chicago, drew an overflow crowd to the new quarters yesterday afternoon. Members of the clergy found it difficult to move through the building, so dense was the throng, as they went from room to room for prayers and blessings. The activities of the center, which is under the auspices of the Council of Catholic Women, already are under way, and include sports of various types, classes in English and instrutcion in numerous subjects.

Sunday Concerts

BY EDWARD MOORE.

OF the five concerts in the loop district yesterday, two were benefit events, and of these two one became extra important through presenting a child wonder who fully deserves the name. Like two other young marvels of the violin, Menuhin and Ricci, he comes from San Francisco.

He is Grisha Goluboff, a tiny lad, who played the Mendelssohn Concerto at the Civic Opera house in a way to leave his audience gasping. He is uncanny in tone, technic, and sense of musical beauty. Necessarily his tone is not a large one yet, but it is of a quality to make one wonder. And he has a sense of proportion, form, and tempo to make one wonder still more. Give him a few, a very few, more years, and the chances are strong that he is going to make the musical world sit up.

The concert was for the benefit of the Hebrew Theological college and the program was spacious. In addition to young Mr. Goluboff, it was presented by Frida Savini, soprano; Alexander Kipnis, basso; Cantor Mordecai Hershmann, and the orchestra of the Civic Opera company, directed by Leo Kopp.

Next door, at the Civic theater, there was another benefit program. It was being done by Barre Hill, the young baritone greatly endowed with resonant voice, excellent stage presence, and a desire to sing new and interesting music. The institution benefiting by this attractive recital is the Poor Children's Shelter.

Of the other musicians of the day, Florence Stage, pianist, was a newcomer at the Playhouse. Evidently having been an earnest student of piano technic, Miss Stage delights in massive effects, and has the ability to manage them easily and deftly. If she was not entirely able to dispel the impression that Schumann's Sonata in F sharp minor is an uncommonly long composition, she at least gave the work as good a performance as it has had hereabouts for a number of seasons. Elsewhere there were numbers by Mendelssohn, Couperin, Prokofieff, Debussy, and Chopin.

Ambrose J. Wyrick, tenor, who has not appeared in song recital in some time, returned to the Studebaker yesterday to present a program that represen..d many of the world's races and nations. He is a fluent speaker, and introduced his songs with bits of intimate, chatty description which both informed and delighted his audience. He was a pronounced hit.

The Don Cossack Male chorus was back at Orchestra hall for its second concert in three days, singing a somewhat different program but with the same unending vigor of tone and stirring fervor. When you hear this fiery group sing "Ay, Ookhnem" you have heard a full drama in terms of folk music, and other songs matched it.

Bogan Advises Against Pupils Seeking Work

Study for Better Jobs in Future, He Urges.

WITH the end of the current school semester drawing near, Superintendent Bogan will issue a warning to Chicago school children today to continue their studies rather than to aggravate the unemployment situation by quitting school to look for work.

Addressing his remarks to parents as well as teachers, Mr. Bogan said, "Please urge your boys and girls to use their time to acquire and improve knowledge and skill to the end that when better times come—as they surely will—pupils will be ready to meet them.

"Eighth and ninth grade graduates should use every effort to go to high school. Two year course students should be urged to transfer to four year courses. High school graduates should be encouraged to find means to continue at least part of their education and training so that they will be prepared to hold their own with later graduates.

"Unless children under 16 years have written promise of employment on which to secure employment certificates instruct them without fail to enter their next grade Feb. 1. Convince those over 16 that they must not add themselves to the burden of unemployment by staying out of school in the hope of a job.

"The Chicago public schools are facing a problem of public responsibility growing out of the current depression. Never in the history of the schools have so many children been enrolled. Especially in the high schools is the enrollment high. Never have the needs of the children been more manifest; never have the resources at the command of the schools seemed so inadequate; never has the personnel been so depressed in spirit.

"Nevertheless I believe that the schools are the best places for boys and girls, especially in this time of unemployment. When we use poverty as the excuse for nonattendance we subject the children to all the evils of poverty, ignorance, and disheartening purposelessness. Even a child who may not make what the teacher would deem satisfactory progress is better off in school than on the street or in the dreary atmosphere of a poverty stricken home."

4,000 Delegates Open Food Industries' Conventions Today

More than 4,000 delegates are expected to attend the 25th annual convention of the National Canners association and its affiliated organization, the Canning Machinery and Supplies association and the National Food Brokers association, which will start today in the Stevens hotel and continue through the week.

Other food supply groups meeting in Chicago this week are: the National Wholesale Grocers, at the Congress hotel; the American Fruit and Vegetable Shippers association, at the Hotel Sherman; the Pickle Packers association, and the American Grocery Manufacturers, at the Palmer house.

Francis A. Harding of Watertown, Mass., president of the canners' association, said yesterday that prices of the industry's products are now at ruinous levels, and that means to regulate supply to demand would be discussed. He added that the canners were too individualistic to tolerate any price fixing or assignment of production quotas.

Exhibits of canning machinery will be held in the exhibition hall at the Stevens, beginning at noon today.

Union League Boys' Clubs Board Will Meet Today

The annual meeting of the Union League Foundation for Boys' clubs will be held at noon today in the Union League club, F. V. Thomson, managing director of the foundation, announced yesterday. Elmer C. Jensen, president of the foundation, will preside. Clifton R. Bechtel, chairman of the zoning committee of the Chicago Real Estate board, will speak on "Blighted Areas." Lewis E. Myers, president of the board of education, and William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, will be present. Annual reports of the foundation will be given and an election of trustees will be held.

CIVIC ORCHESTRA TO PLAY CHICAGO COMPOSER'S WORK

Robert L. Sanders, Chicago composer, will get his first public hearing of his suite for orchestra on Jan. 31 at Orchestra hall. On that afternoon it will be the concluding number on the program of the Chicago Civic orchestra at the first concert of that organization's 1932 season.

ROBERT L. SANDERS. [From drawing by Deane Keller.]

Mr. Sanders' work was composed while he was attending the American academy at Rome, following his award of a scholarship there in 1925. At the conclusion of his fourth year his suite was played by a symphony orchestra, introducing a saxophone for the first time, it was said, into such an organization in the eternal city. That presentation of the work was in a building containing the tomb of Octavius Caesar.

Mr. Sanders and Leo Sowerby are the Chicago composers who are fellows of the American academy at Rome. Mr. Sowerby was instrumental in Mr. Sanders' appointment to that institution. Mr. Sanders' work to be played by the Civic orchestra includes a prelude, "Mississippi," barn dance, finale. His quartet in A minor will be played by the Chicago String quartet at the Chicago Woman's club, Feb. 21.

Chicagoan Among 9 Named for Further Research in Germany

New York, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Nine men, each active in a field in which Germans have made great advances, have been given grants for study and research in Germany and Austria by trustees of the Oberlaender trust.

The trust was created by Gustave Oberlaender, retired manufacturer of Reading, Pa., about a year ago. He set aside a million dollar fund to promote good will between the United States and Germany and to be administered as a part of the Carl Schurz memorial foundation.

Among the nine is Prof. Douglas Waples of Chicago who is studying the problems of adult reading material as they have been worked out by certain German librarians.

Hoosier Salon's Display of Art Is Best in Years

Several Prizes Awarded; Opened to Public.

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

THE eighth annual Hoosier salon opens today to the public in the Marshall Field galleries. It is the strongest exhibit Indianans have put on for several years. Perhaps the finest painting of the season will be, in many people's estimation, the beautiful "Portrait of Mrs. Alexander Cameron" by Wayman Adams. It is a superb canvas, brilliant in technique, gorgeous in color.

Different in kind but excellent in itself is the "Wood Vender" by W. W. Woolsey, which was awarded the John C. Shaffer prize of $500 as being the "outstanding picture of the exhibition." It is an interesting canvas, very well done. The donkey is delightfully drawn and the vender of wood and his customer are types not easily forgotten. Across the room from this canvas is the exquisite "Forest Rhythms" by Olive Rush. Her fragile and delicate fancy luxuriates in these slim trees and timid deer.

The paintings are well divided between portraits, landscapes and still life. We recognize with a great deal of pleasure the work of Lucie Hartrath, James Topping, Marques Reitzel, Oscar B. Erickson and Frank V. Dudley. Edgar Forkner shows a stunning painting of flowers in his large "Late Summer Flowers." Sally Hall Steketee shows another beautiful flower picture with "In a Greenhouse."

Clay Kelly offers a wet, misty morning in Jackson park [perhaps], in "Gray Blanket." George La Chance has an interesting study in his "Portrait Sketch." "The Rockies" by Clifton Wheeler is sturdy and fascinating with its well defined billows of rock rising higher and higher into the sky. "The Village Church" by Karl Brandner has a spring quality that is attractive. Phil Malicoate offers an excellent piece of painting in "The "White Bowl."

Among the prize awards already made are to C. Warner Williams, the Mrs. Catherine Barker Hickok prize of $300 for the outstanding piece of sculpture; to John Jackson, the Shawnee Stone company prize of $100 for "Gargoyle"; to Frank V. Dudley, the Mrs. Thomas Meek Butler prize of $200; to G. Ames Aldrich, the Alexander F. Banks prize of $100 for "Mid-Winter, Indiana," and to J. M. Henniger for "And Models Call This Work," the Culver Military academy prize of $200.

THE STAGE

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

MAURICE CHEVALIER, the engaging young Frenchman whose casual, clever way with a popular song has made him an American film star, offers a program of intimate entertainment at the Erlanger theater this week—"in the flesh," of course, with that Bourbon lip of his, which is emphasized by his imitators, in full view. It is, one might add, not half as pendulous and overgrown a lip as Al Jolson would have you believe, and it helps to create a decidedly merry Parisian grin.

Chevalier's show is an unpretentious affair, composed of two earnest lads at pianos and himself—nothing more. It is an hour and a half of informal drawing room amusement—a pleasant Franco-American "evening at home." The pianists—Jacques Fray and Mario Braggiotti—play with art, but without high-art frills, such things as Ravel's "Bolero," a medley of Vincent Youman's song hits, and "Yankee Doodle" after the manners of Chopin, George Gershwin, and Johann Strauss. Chevalier talks, sings, and impersonates, mainly in the vernacular of the day, although he indulges in French now and then to prove that he is really an imported article.

His songs in English are out of his film and radio repertory. His French numbers, which he prefaces with whimsical explanations, are "C'Etait Moi," "M. et Mme. Elephant," "Dites-Moi, Ma Mère," and "Ma Régulaire." The latter throws new light upon the folklore of the modern Apache, and is a choice bit of Parisian music hall stuff. Chevalier's suggestion of the right way to identify an Apache [by the hop-skip-and-jump with which he crosses a curbing] should be of value to American tourists.

At the close of the first half of his program Chevalier imitates a trio of French variety comedians—Dorville, "the sea lion"; Buquot, the stiff-necked, and Meyer, the esthetic. If they ever catch him at it a damage suit or a riot will ensue. To close his second chapter he presents character studies of Rudy Vallee and Willie Howard in the act of imitating him. These skits prove that he knows something about the art of self-defense in caricature.

A diverting personality and a complete artist in his neat little sphere of entertainment—such is the impression that you will carry away from Chevalier's show. He has altered his schedule for the week and announces that he will give matinée performances today, Wednesday, and Saturday instead of every day in the week.

Cornelia Otis Skinner, who is winning a place beside Ruth Draper with her self-written character sketches, began an engagement of one week at the Studebaker theater last night. The feature of her program is "The Wives of Henry VIII." The performance will be reviewed later.

"Fata Morgana," a comedy by Ernest Vadja, will begin an engagement of four weeks at the Harris theater tonight under the auspices of the Dramatic League of Chicago. Morgan Farley and Miss Ara Gerald have the leading rôles.

City People Lonely Amid Crowds, Says Oak Park Preacher

The hearthstone, the back yard, and the center table around which the family gathered in the evening were urged last night as the properties to restore the old home life by Dr. Albert Parker Fitch, pastor of the Park Avenue Presbyterian church, New York city, in a speech before the Chicago Sunday Evening club at Orchestra Hall.

"We live crowded, but lonely, existences," said Dr. Fitch. "In our great cities everyone is concerned with his own problems and fortunes; our industrial order has broken up the old home life.

"The way to cure our lonely lives is by leading homely lives. To set up this homely scene, we should reuse the hearthstone, the back yard and the center table around which the family gathered evenings. In this scene it should not be forgotten the old tie church connection was an important factor."

Moderns May Surpass Christ, Professor Says

S. J. Case of U. of C. Writes New Book on Savior.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

UNDER the imprimatur of the University of Chicago press, a new book will appear tomorrow in Chicago's shops. The author declares that Jesus should no longer be considered a standard of perfection. The book, entitled, "Jesus Through the Centuries," was written by Prof. Shirley Jackson Case, chairman of the department of church history at the University of Chicago.

Rather than regard the Nazarene as a standard of perfection, Dr. Case contends that he should be conceived of as an inspirational figure. The author also asserts that it is wrong to look back on the founder of Christianity as an unattainable model of perfect living.

"To accept Jesus' teachings as infallible rules of conduct," Dr. Case argues, "not only ignores the findings of historical research, but also hinders true religious living. Creative religious living must strive not to imitate, but to transcend all past and present standards, not even excepting the example and precepts of Jesus. His way of life is not necessarily our way of life. We are not at liberty to substitute the religion Jesus lived and taught for the religion we must live and teach today.

Pacifism, contrary to current teachings of its proponents, was not necessarily central to the Nazarene's religion, Dr. Case points out. In fact, that emphasis, the book argues, along with many other emphases that have appeared in Christian history, was a part of the attempt of men to adjust Jesus' teachings to suit the thought of a particular group or time. This practice of adjusting the teachings to harmonize with men's thought began almost immediately after the crucifixion, Dr. Case says.

The author urges that this sort of liberal interpretation cease. For, after all, the new book says, Jesus lived many years ago, and "who are we to judge how he might feel about prohibition and disarmament. We may readily concede that were he, as we know him in his historical career, living in America, we should not elect him President, or deposit our savings in a bank under his management, or employ him as an architect. Perhaps we might even feel hesitation in calling him to the pastorate of our family church."

The new book asks that a new appreciation of the Nazarene consistent with historical scholarship and modern scientific thinking be substituted for "the constantly revised, eternally up to date conception of Jesus.

"The new appreciation of Jesus," Dr. Case writes, "is concerned with his personal religious living in so far as it is recoverable from the pages of history. Instead of seeking metaphysical justification for making him the object of our worship, we take our place at his side while he worships. We do not ask him to tell us how we ought to worship or what we ought to do; we only ask the privilege of close fellowship with him amid the characteristic scenes of his earthy career."

Fashions for Spring Are Full of Allure; Style Show Is Opened

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

ALL femininity is going to be crowned with chic this spring, and gowned—with what allure! We're through with trying fashions, mesdames et mesdemoiselles. Just a peek last night into the Empire room of the Palmer house revealed the glad news as half a hundred mannequins went through their dress rehearsal for the four day style show opening tonight, under auspices of the Associated Dress Industries of America.

They're youthful and swagger, these spring modes. They're military. They're wearable. They're gracefully utilitarian. They remember that there have been bruises and dents in the average pocketbook, and take kind cognizance of that element. They combine the dressiness of an afternoon gown with the more conservative lines of a street costume, merely by adding a trim little jacket. They have clipped an inch or two off the accustomed skirt length, permitting more freedom of movement and a corresponding slight decrease in manufacturing cost. They're gra-a-n-d-d!

Take the daytime dresses. Skirts have abandoned those intricate diagonal gorings and godets, and hang straight and free again, to the general improvement of the average figure. Not that they aren't pleated or slightly flaring, in their own individual ways. But they are far less accented than they have been for a season or two, and far more becoming.

Emphasis this spring is toward achieving a wide shouldered effect, contrasted with a smaller, pinched-in waist. It's done, sometimes, in the military manner. With epaulets and raglan shoulders, high collars, buttons, and capes. Short, saucy capes on dresses and suits and coats will be popular and smart.

And take the hats! Yes, by all means, take those hats, which one spectator characterized last night as "those delicious, beluscious chapeaux." Universally dashing and attractive. The Breton sailor, for instance, which of course got its inspiration from the headgear of the Breton peasant—a ridiculously tiny affair set up on the head like a beret, and of the ubiquitous straw the approaching season is rolling before it like a tidal wave.

Every single, solitary felt hat is going to be inundated, swamped and swept into oblivion by the new favorite, straw. Either natural or synthetic, rough, preferably, but also medium and fine weaves. With a tiny brim, or none at all, and a wisp of a nose veil.

Black, navy and brown are popular colors.

The Charming Cheat

By Clara Sharpe Hough

INSTALLMENT I.

A MATTER OF RELATIONSHIP.

The fact that the front door was painted bright blue did not particularly encourage Ricardo. The door itself looked, beneath that brilliant paint, a cheap and ramshackle affair. Above the portal itself was a grillwork too flamboyant in design, cobwebby, dusty and uncared for. Above that were window boxes of a sort, of no particular color at all, from which depended discouraged looking trailing vines whose identity was strange to Ricardo's Californian eye. A row of mail boxes with bells above them, just within the blue door, were identified by cards, on one of which he found the name he sought, Miss Filomena Stanley.

Poor Aunt Filomena. She had been reduced indeed to dwell in this shabby neighborhood of mean streets and grimy houses. He pushed the button vigorously.

A violent clicking came from the forbidding inner door. He opened it.

Halfway in and halfway out of the door Ricardo stopped.

"I'm looking for Miss Stanley," he called, feeling undignified in addressing the unseen voice.

"Some mistake," he began. Then he raised his voice, for it was apparent the invisible female did not hear him.

"Miss Stanley," he shouted, "Miss Filomena Stanley."

"Yes, yes, yes," shrieked the voice in reply, "Come on up, I say! She's not dressed. Do you expect her to come down after you in her shimmy?"

Slightly puzzled and certainly mildly shocked, Ricardo ascended a flight of stairs and looked about a dim hall where only closed doors greeted his gaze.

He mounted another flight.

In all there were four flights of stairs. Then suddenly his feet rang on bare boards and on an open door was a rectangle of flaring light, framing the shadowy face of a girl with flying hair and a slim figure in (no, he was not mistaken) pajamas.

"I'm sorry to intrude," he began, "I had no idea it was so late." He wouldn't have supposed that nine was late in New York. Still, possibly Aunt Filomena retired early, and this girl, a companion perhaps——. He could not even complete the thought, for the girl was giving a shriek of delight, or possibly it was of welcome.

"It's not late, it's the beginning of the evening," she proclaimed in a raucous shout, and seizing him by the arm she dragged him into the room, calling, "Filomena! Fil! Filly-dilly, a man! A brand new man!"

Ricardo, withdrawing his arm from her clasp in distaste, looked at the girl and at the large, dim room lighted by two pale gas jets and an array of guttering candles stuck wildly in bottles of every shape and color.

"I must apologize," began Ricardo, wondering wildly how he was to get out of the place, where he certainly had no business to have come and no desire to remain. "You see, I was looking for Miss Stanley, Miss Filomena Stanley. She's my aunt."

The girl dropped into a disreputable looking armchair that creaked ominously as she landed and twined her knees somehow around each other.

"She lives here," she said. "Why not sit down? Who did you say you were?"

"Miss Stanley is my aunt," he explained, accepting the chair. "I've only been in New York a few days. You see, my mother died only recently, and it was only then I found Miss Stanley was living here, and naturally I thought, my mother had been sending checks, you see, and it must have seemed strange to her that the money stopped, and I thought I'd——." He paused. The girl with the tousled hair was looking at him almost too intently.

"What did you say your name is?"

"I hadn't said, but it is Ricardo Dane. If Miss Stanley can't see me now, I can come tomorrow. I don't like to intrude——."

"Mr. Dane," she said, "Filomena will be more than glad to see you, particularly if you can explain to her why the money has stopped. How long since you have seen her, you say?"

"I have never seen her," he admitted. "When she was in San Francisco I was a small boy on the ranch. I don't think she ever came out to the ranch."

The tousled girl waved her cigaret toward him without reply. He rose to his feet and faced a second girl in pajamas in the doorway just behind his chair.

The newcomer was as blond as Frances was dark. Her hair, just short of golden, lay in a wide bang across her forehead and was pinned in a demure knot at her neck. He was aware at once of that hair, and of the orange colored satin pajamas she wore, which for some reason suited her exactly. He did not even wonder for a moment, as he had at first sight of Frances, if he had got into entirely the wrong sort of establishment.

"I'm Filomena Stanley," explained the bright haired girl, "and I would know you anywhere for Ricardo Dane."

"But my aunt," he began.

The orange satin shoulders shrugged ever so slightly. "I shall have to be your aunt," their owner said graciously. "I quite hated the idea, for I've always thought of you as a hulking brat in corduroys, but—now that I see you, really——."

"But you can't be my Aunt Filomena," protested Ricardo wildly, "you can't possibly be my Aunt Filomena! How—how can you be my Aunt Filomena? Why, she—she was my mother's sister, at least her half-sister, and she——."

"Pish-tush," said his relative airily, strolling out into the room. "Of course I can be your aunt. In fact, I am your aunt, and that's all there is to that. Give me a cigaret, please." She seated herself on a cushion on the floor, with her feet tucked under her. "Thank you. There's no use arguing over a simple physiological fact. Of course, I'm your mother's sister—her half-sister, that is. Old men will sow their wild oats, you know."

Ricardo stared down at her. He did not believe for one instant that she was his aunt. It was too ridiculous to discuss. But she was so lovely to look at, with a tall blue candle flaring in a dirty green bottle just behind her beautiful burnished head, that he could hardly marshal his thoughts.

And the things she had just said—wild oats, indeed! How could her name be Filomena Stanley if she were not indeed the Filomena Stanley he has come to seek at this very address? How could she not be Filomena Stanley?

Whatever conclusion he might have been groping toward, it was not to be arrived at just then. For without warning a head appeared from behind the piano, where apparently some sort of lurking place had contained a young man with an astounding shock of red hair.

"Filomena, darling," he implored, "if this is an assignation let me know and I'll leave quietly. If it's the vanguard of the party, do present me."

"He's my nephew," said the girl with the bangs, without turning her lovely head, "my long lost nephew from Australia—no, it's California, isn't it, nephew?"

The young man leaped over the piano and approached Ricardo with outstretched hand. He wore, as Ricardo might have expected, an artist's smock.

"The name is Pendleton," said the owner of the smock. "You may be familiar with my stuff—it comes out now and then in Vanity Fair."

Then the rest of the party began to arrive.

He returned to his hotel at the hour sometimes designated as "with the milk."

Next morning, which began at 11:30 for him, he tried to recall details of the evening in their proper order. At some time during that hazy night he had eaten great quantities of doubtful spaghetti heavily loaded with garlic and had drunk equally vast quantities of powerless cloudy red wine.

There might have been about a dozen people there at first. There were Frances and Aunt Filomena in their pajamas, the red haired young man in the smock, the girl named Elinor who had been behind the piano with him, several girls in evening frocks and several fellows in more conservative garb than the self-effacing Mr. Pendleton.

Later a lot of other young people had appeared from somewhere. To none except Mr. Pendleton could he recall any introductions.

Seen in the light of next morning, the party appeared more garish and noisy and less enjoyable than it had at the time. It was undeniable that he had kissed at least two girls whose names he did not know. And he had a perfectly frightful head this morning and a distinctly low opinion of the tastes of his Aunt Filomena, whom he had come across the continent to find.

But whatever taste she might have, there was no doubt at all about the beauty of Aunt Filomena's golden head, with its bright bangs above a charming little face with a pointed chin and deep blue eyes. He had danced with her, and there was no regret in his memory of the high moment of the evening, when he had stopped in the middle of a fox trot to give her suddenly a very unnephewlike kiss.

He recalled that they had planned to talk everything over today at luncheon. Aunt Filomena apparently thought that this important matter of their relationship could not be settled offhand.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 24.—One of the million dollar by-products of the movies is the business of Fanchon and Marco here. Fanchon [Mrs. William Simon, formerly Fanny, or Fanchon Wolff] and Marco, her brother [Marcus Wolff] this week celebrate the tenth anniversary of the start of their partnership as purveyors of short stage musical comedy shows, generally as prologues for motion picture exhibitions.

FANCHON.

In the ten years since the brother and sister launched their enterprise from the small Warfield theater in San Francisco, from which they soon transferred to Los Angeles, because of the abundance of costumes, props, pretty trained dancing girls, and stage business tieups here, Fanchon and Marco now have a multi-million dollar annual business.

Last year Fanchon & Marco's pay roll to actresses, actors, technicians, craftsmen, musicians, and executives was $12,500,000.

Among stars now in films who got a start with Fanchon & Marco and came along in a big way are Mary Lewis, Vanessi, Frances Williams, Paul Ashe, Harry Richman, Eddie Peabody. During the last year Lucille Page, Mitzi Mayfair, and Lyda Roberti graduated from some of the F. & M. shows to become hits on Broadway in "Vanities," "Follies," and "You Said It" respectively.

The brother and sister partners have shops at the Hollywood studio which construct and paint all their own scenery, sew and dye all their own costumes, construct their own props, and train their own choruses. There are five rehearsal stages on the studio grounds. The day I was there last week Betty Compson was rehearsing her coming stage appearance act involving a troupe of twelve impersonators of Chaplin, Laurel and Hardy, Fan: / Brice, Langdon, Anna May Wong, Bob Montgomery, Ann Harding, and others on one stage. On another stage two chorus girls who are always alluded to on Fanchon-Marco premises as "sw: kissed beauties" were practicing kicking.

Fanchon is 36 years old. Marco is 38. Both were broke ten years ago.

Woman Finds Pretty Kitchen Conducive to Better Appearance

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Is a housewife no more, no less attractive than the kitchen she presides over?

The idea, a bit novel as a beauty sermon, has more in it than meets the eye at first glance. Thanks to an "Interested Reader" for it. "I. R." suggests that the more attractively a housewife fits her kitchen out, the more appealing to the eye she herself will become. She can prove it in her own person, "I. R." testifies. Formerly, kitchen work to her was something to do in the clothes she was least proud of.

She was not very keen about the work, either, so she says. Clothes, mood and dirty dishes all represented about the same degree of beauty. The iceman and the grocery boy delivered their packages promptly, without a smile for her. One day some kind spirit moved her to do something about the kitchen. It was a fair sized room. She looked up some of her old magazines for kitchen decorating hints.

And presently, instead of the gloomy, ill lighted room, there was gayety, cheer, atmosphere. The walls were papered with pale yellow, washable paper. Crisp yellow organdy curtains were at the window, if you please. These were edged with blue. Table and chairs were painted cream, touched with blue. The chair seats had cretonne cushions tied with tape.

A shelf was erected on the side wall and some good family pottery was arranged thereon. Flowers were at the window, not just a sickly geranium plant. And there was a screen to hide the stove from view—a gay screen. A small wall bookshelf with the cookbooks ranged thereon was hung. And nice prints were hung on the walls.

The kitchen evolved from the proverbial ugly duckling into something altogether delightful.

"So," says the mistress, "I wasn't going to be behind in the decorative uplift move. I am a different looking woman—and I don't mind telling you, the work is much more pleasing to me."

Now, why shouldn't that be entered in a beauty lecture? Drab surroundings make drab spirits and drab spirits make drab women. Hurray for the kitchen beauty tip!

BEAUTY ANSWERS

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

HELEN: RECOVERING THE girlish figure after the birth of a baby certainly is being done by countless numbers of women, so don't get discouraged, but let your doctor suggest when and what exercises to start out with.

ANNE: KEEPING THOSE TYPEwriting fingers eligible for bridge evenings is a job. The typing is so hard on nails inclined to be brittle! Lubricate the nails with nightly applications of oil or cream.

Forty and Eight to Give "Frolics of 1932" Next Month

More than 2,500 war veterans and their families and friends are expected to attend the "Frolics of 1932" to be given by the Forty and Eight society on the night of Feb. 6 at the Lincoln Park Masonic temple, 1205 North Dearborn street, according to Sig. D. Nothhelfer, chef de gare of the organization.

WEDDINGS

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Berkson of Highland Park announce the marriage of their daughter, Ethel May, to Marc D. Aisner of Highland Park, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Aisner of Boston, on Saturday at the Northmoor Country club. The former Miss Berkson, after completing a course at Kemper Hall, attended the College Feminin de Boufflemont in France for two years. Mr. Aisner attended Boston and Columbia universities. They will reside in Highland Park.

Mr. and Mrs. William Charles Hartray of Evanston announce the marriage of their niece, Miss Helen Corinne Phillips, to Henry Nicholas Hudson Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Hudson of Winnetka, on Saturday at the Notre Dame log chapel. The bride is a graduate of Northwestern university and a member of Phi Beta Phi. Mr. Hudson was graduated from Notre Dame.

Knock That Cold In A Jiffy

Relief Now Almost Before You Know It

If you want quick relief from a cold, go back to first principles and use something you know does the business—don't start "trying" a lot of fancy ideas or remedies. Even a "little" cold is too dangerous to take chances on.

Get Hill's Cascara Quinine. A scientific formula made to do ONE THING WELL: to knock a cold in a jiffy, not to cure a hundred different things.

Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too, that's all. Soon those mean, aching pains in head and body begin to go; the cold breaks up; poisons leave your system. Almost before you know it, you feel like a new person.

If it doesn't do that, your money back. Get a box now. You'll be surprised at the speed with which it works. Costs only a few cents.

SOCIETY NEWS AND FASHIONS OF THE DAY

Phoenix Draws Chicagoans for Winter's Days

While Others Are Busy with Gayety Here.

MRS. WILLIAM D. McILVAINE of 1100 Lake Shore drive is leaving on Friday of this week for Phoenix where she will spend the rest of the winter. She will stop in Denver for a visit of several weeks with her sister on her return in the early spring.

Mrs. Andrew McNally of Evanston also is going to Phoenix this week. Both she and Mrs. McIlvaine will be at the Biltmore, which is beginning to have a good sized colony of Chicagoans, so our Phoenix representative writes. Edward I. Cudahy and his eldest son, William, who has just recovered from bronchial pneumonia, are there for a few weeks and then they are going on to Santa Barbara for a visit with Mr. Cudahy's sister, Mrs. William P. Nelson. Mrs. Cudahy plans to be among the stay-at-homes this winter.

Another young boy who is at the Biltmore because he hasn't been in the best of health is Stuyvesant Peabody Jr., who hasn't had any illness, but is growing so fast that it was thought best to send him away for the winter. He and his mother expect to go to California, and perhaps Mexico, from Phoenix in the late winter.

Other Chicagoans Now at Phoenix Hotel.

Miss Joanna Fortune and her nieces, Mary and Barbara Fortune, who have been at the Biltmore for some time, will join Mrs. John L. Fortune and the eldest daughter, Jane, in San Francisco, to sail on Feb. 6 for Honolulu. Mrs. Fortune and Miss Jane leave on Feb. 1 for the west. Miss Jane is returning today from Cincinnati, where she went to be maid of honor at the marriage Saturday of Miss Mary Ann Richards and Nicholas Longworth Wallingford. Miss Fortune and Miss Richards were schoolmates at Rosemary hall and both were debutantes this winter.

Among other Chicagoans at the Biltmore now are Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. E. Ward and their children. Mr. and Mrs. George M. Ludlow and Miss Isabelle Ludlow of Evanston are at the Westward Ho for the season. The Mark Healys, who have a ranch at Castle Hot Springs, and Mrs. Seymour Wheeler, who is at the hotel there, were in a party that made a trip on horseback recently to the old Crown Point mine, now deserted, but one of the big mines which figured prominently in the old Arizona days.

Burridge D. Butler has returned for a few days to Chicago from his winter place in Arcadia near Phoenix, leaving Mrs. Butler in the west with a guest, Mrs. Richard Buchanan of New York.

Mrs. Ira Darling of Evanston, who went to the San Marcos at Chandler the middle of this month, will be joined shortly by Mr. Darling and their daughter, Dorothy. Mrs. Darling's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Cornell of Chicago and Del Mar, Cal., are spending the winter at the Westward Ho in Phoenix.

Arts Club Will Hear Budapest Quartet Saturday.

The Arts club is mailing cards to its members today for a musical by the Budapest String quartet next Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The invitations are late getting out because the quartet's tour of this country is to be a brief and hurried one, and it was only through last minute arrangements that the management was fortunate enough to engage the players.

Mrs. Lucius Booth Sherman will give a tea on Wednesday at her Winnetka residence for her daughter-in-law-to-be, Miss Gwendolyn Thomen of New York, who will become Mrs. Roger Fowler Sherman in April, and for Mrs. Stuart Sherman, who was Miss Jane Pearce before her marriage last April. Miss Thomen arrived on Saturday for a month's visit with her fiancé's family. Her wedding to Mr. Sherman has been tentatively set for April 12, so she and her prospective husband will probably do some house hunting while she is here, as they have decided to reside in Evanston after their marriage.

MINGLE STYLES, POLITICS

PEGGY HAMBLETON, MRS. WALLER BORDEN, MRS. FRANCIS S. RICKCORDS.

Harry G. Selfridge Jr. Visits Cousins in Winnetka.

Harry Gordon Selfridge Jr., who arrived at the Blackstone on Friday, spent the week-end in Winnetka with his cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Hobart P. Young. Mr. and Mrs. Young gave a dinner party for Mr. Selfridge on Saturday evening and later took their guests to dance at Indian Hill. Last night they gave a buffet supper for a group of young people and then went to the hockey game. Mr. Young will give a luncheon today at the Chicago club for Mr. Selfridge.

Dr. and Mrs. Wilhelm L. Baum will be hosts at a musical by Jurien Hoekstra this afternoon at their residence at 1508 North State parkway. The program will be given in the large ballroom of the Baums' house, which is, by the way, one of the few remaining homes large enough to permit their owners to do all sorts of entertaining. Mr. and Mrs. Hoekstra, who have been residing in Chicago for about two years, will move to New York next month, so the musical this afternoon is by way of being a farewell party for them.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Crane, with their daughter, Miss Florence Crane, and her son and daughter-in-law, the Cornelius Cranes, left Saturday for Santa Barbara. They will spend most of the winter in the west, as Mrs. Crane does not plan to open her estate on Jekyll island this year.

Watson Armour III. and Jack Simpson Start Trip.

A. Watson Armour III. and Jack Simpson sailed last Saturday from New York for a fascinating trip that will take them down the Mediterranean and into Africa and probably to India before they return home.

Mrs. Donald Frost and her daughter, Miss Mary Frost, are leaving today for their home in Boston after a week's visit with Mrs. Frost's mother, Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson of 38 Banks street.

"The Green Room" will meet tomorrow evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Leverone at 399 Fullerton parkway. WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Vice President Curtis was honor guest at dinner last evening of Maj. Gen. Ben H. Fuller, commandant of the marine corps, and Mrs. Fuller. Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Edward Everett Gann. Mrs. Gann left today for a fortnight's trip to the middle west. She will make several campaign speeches, the first in Omaha, and will speak in Kansas City, Topeka, and Oklahoma City before arriving in Chicago, where she will be the guest over Sunday, Feb. 7, of Mrs. Jacob Baur.

Public Problems and Fashions Vie for Interest

Sidelights on Meeting at Mrs. Borden's.

"HARD times, if they don't destroy us, are supposed to improve us," philosophized one of the town's fashionable young matrons as she sipped a cup of tea at Mrs. Waller Borden's political "at home" Saturday afternoon. "And learning something more of affairs fundamental is just one of those processes of improvement."

What an interesting sidelight on the busy and serious programs members of society are following these days with, apparently, no sacrifice of personal chic. In fact, judging from some of the smartly dressed women who discussed politics Saturday afternoon with Mrs. Borden's brother, Ald. James B. Waller [43d] and State Representative Robert M. Woodward, it would seem that this "improvement" business is also extending to fashions by way of a terrific reaction against sumptuous effects. Rough lightweight woolens and the new silks, as dull and as inconsequential in effect as the wools, society has adopted as the smarter bet any day.

Mrs. Borden chose for her hostess gown the other afternoon the simple becoming lines of a Vionnet model fashioned in a pebbly brown woolen. A shoulder bouquet of gardenias contrasted effectively with the dark background and the sable trim. Mrs. Edward R. Fifield was also wearing a dark wool with a clever green scarf swung jauntily over the shoulder. Her matching sailor hat used only a quill for ornament.

Mrs. Stanley Zaring's gown well expressed the emphasis laid this season on color and material contrasts fashioned as it was of dull black crêpe with a colorful brocade bodice. With this Mrs. Zaring wore a simple black cloche. Among the other young women who were "committing" themselves to politics were Letitia Channon in a brown velvet tea gown, and Jean Wegener in a smart royal blue crêpe that used a lighter tone for trimming. The two Hambleton sisters, Peggy and Eleanor, who is now Mrs. Francis Stanley Rickcords, arrived just in time for a cup of tea. A casual black veil surmounting a small black hat and a jaunty little muff were smart notes in Miss Hambleton's ensemble. Mrs. Rickcords' brown felt sailor, tilted at just the right angle, completed her tailored silk costume over which she was wearing a mink wrap.

No fashionable political gathering, however small, would be complete without Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Jacob Baur, now our Republican national committee woman, and Mrs. Fletcher Durbin. Narrow bands of ermine made Mrs. Baur's trim black suit vivacious. Her matching hat was cleverly trimmed in patent.

Mrs. George T. Langhorne and Mrs. Moses J. Wentworth, who assisted Mrs. Borden during the afternoon, also appeared in the ever fashionable black. The perky white piqué flower on Mrs. Langhorne's dull crêpe was one of those nice, becoming details that adds softness to many a costume. Silver beads in narrow bands trimmed the turbin and tea gown worn by Mrs. Wentworth.

Official Contract

By Charles True Adams

(International bridge authority; author of "Official Contract at Sight.")

We have often heard of the gay nineties. We are certainly now in the psychological thirties. We even hear that the depression is merely the result of improper psychology. But—just try and think yourself out of it.

One of the latest terms invented by the expert to confuse the average player is the psychic bid. West's bidding in yesterday's play-a-problem bordered on the psychic. It was, to be technical, at least semi-psychic. This was the hand:

NORTH
♠—K
♥—A,J,10,9
♦—10,6,5,3
♣—8,6,5,4

WEST (Dealer): ♠—Q,6 ♥—8,7,6,5,3 ♦—A,K,7 ♣—A,Q,10

EAST: ♠—J,7,2 ♥—K,Q,2 ♦—J,9,4 ♣—K,J,9,2

SOUTH
♠—A,10,9,8,5,4,3
♥—4

West dealt and bid one no-trump. North passed. East bid two no-trumps, South three spades, and West bid four hearts. North doubled and all passed. While all sorts of fancy terms can be applied to West's four heart bid, it was based on a really simple thought. The one thing West needed for his bid was top hearts. He decided that if South was able to bid three spades over two no-trumps that East could not have very much strength in spades. Since he, West, held the majority of the strength in diamonds and clubs, he thought that East's raise to two no-trumps must have been based on considerable top heart strength. He therefore took a chance and bid his four hearts. Certainly not a complex thought and far sounder than North's double.

North opened the ♠ K, dummy played the 2, South the 5, and declarer the 6. North next led the ♦ 3, dummy played the 9, South the Q, and declarer took with the K, leading back the ♥ 3, which he took with dummy's Q. Dummy led back the ♣ 2, which declarer captured with the A, leading back the ♥ 5. North again ducked, playing the 10, and dummy took with the ♥ K. Dummy led the ♣ 9, which declarer took with the ♣ Q, leading the ♣ 10 back and overtaking it in his dummy with the J. Dummy then led the ♣ K, on which West discarded the ♠ Q. Dummy then led the ♠ 7, South played the 9, West trumped with the ♥ 6, and North played the ♥ J, taking the trick. North then led his ♥ A and followed with the ♦ 5, which declarer captured with the A. Declarer then led the ♦ 7 to dummy's ♦ J, dummy returning the ♠ J, which declarer trumped with the ♥ 8 for four-odd and the game.

PLAY-A-PROBLEM: SOLITAIRE OR PARTNERS

Play this hand tonight at your bridge game. Keep a record of the bid and play in the spaces provided. Numbers in the bidding squares are for successive rounds. Check your results with tomorrow's answer.

To play "Solitaire": Record the bids you think each hand would make in the bidding squares. After the final declaration has been made start the play, leading from the hand at declarer's left. As you play each card cross it off of the diagram and record it in the proper square, as S, 3, H. K, etc. In the last column indicate the hand which won the round and lead from that hand on the next round.

Modern Parents Are Building Character by Indirect Means

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

How many earnest, idealistic parents have given voice to that sentiment! And how unworkable it is with a little child! What we must do is to make virtue attractive. What we must do is to make the necessary, the important things pleasant.

Later on, when character is more nearly set, when moral sense is developed we can expect an understanding that will make an appeal to the sense of right and wrong a logical one. But even then, not often, as abstractions like that are often beyond even quite big children.

In most cases we need to make children see things through their senses—to keep them personal, concrete. We don't talk any more about virtue and vice, right and wrong, and conscious character building.

We build character, indeed, but in a different way. We build character but we do it indirectly. We lead up to the development of a moral sense without the child knowing we're doing it. We teach a child self-control by directing his energies, not by clamping the lid on.

We lead him to do routine things happily and cheerfully by making them interesting and pleasant to do, until they become established habits. We develop his sense of honor by acting honorably to him. We teach him that his word is his bond by keeping our word to him. We keep him truthful not by preaching, but by gaining his confidence and his trust and by setting him an example.

"Right."

"Wrong."

A young child hasn't the capacity to understand them. He has no moral sense. He can't get abstractions.

Don't expect your child to "be good" and hate it, but to "be good and like it," as Dr. Reynolds of Horace Mann school said not long ago.

Paris Actresses Give Impetus to Fur Vogue

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Parisiennes, this midwinter, are going back to black and white for formal daytime ensembles, and they like their black in velvet and their white in fur. Some of the most delectable looking ladies around Paris are wearing black velvet and velveteen suits and dresses trimmed with ermine or white broadtail.

The vogue received a tremendous impetus from the stage side of the footlights. Mme. Yvonne Printemps, wife of Sacha Guitry, and the first lady of the French stage, appears in her new revue wearing black velveteen and white ermine from Jeanne Lanvin. The costume she wears is simply irresistible and no clothes conscious woman could see it without a tremendous yearning toward possession. After the première of the Guitry piece black and white frocks immediately became more numerous, and the Lanvin model worn by Mme. Printemps has been repeated many times for women on the amateur side of the footlights.

This frock is shown in our sketch. I leave it to you to say if it isn't charming. The simplicity of the cut of this dress makes it practical for everyday life, and its material helps, for nothing is more practical than velveteen.

The bodice of this dress is fitted, has long tight sleeves, and buttons down the front with white porcelain buttons, the lowest of which buttons through the leather belt at the waistline. The skirt has an inverted plait down the front and is circular at the sides.

A bib of white ermine ties on the left shoulder and huge puffs of the same fur are slipped over the sleeves and snapped on just at the elbows. The little cap toque is also made of ermine.

Dingy Yellow Disappears Overnight

EVEN if your teeth have been dingy and yellow for years, and faithful care has failed to remedy this unfortunate condition, Kolynos with its unique technique will soon make them clean and attractive. In just 3 days you'll see a great change. Your teeth will look 3 shades whiter.

There's a very definite reason why Kolynos cleans and whitens teeth so remarkably. This double-strength dental cream—utterly unlike anything you've ever used—contains two important ingredients. One—the best and safest cleansing agent known—literally foams into and cleans out every tiny crevice, erases tartar and removes yellowish acid spots. And the second ingredient strikes at the source of most tooth and gum troubles. It kills millions of germs—190 million in 15 seconds, according to tests—that swarm into the mouth and, if neglected, cause decay, discoloration and gum diseases.

Decide to have sound, gleaming white teeth and healthy gums. Start using Kolynos—a half-inch on a dry brush, twice daily. In 3 days a glance at your teeth will tell you why this dental cream is winning thousands of new users every week—your teeth will look 3 shades whiter. SPAIN BATTLES STRIKE; 1 SLAIN, 5 HURT IN RAIDS

Reds Kill Policeman in Clash Near Barcelona.

MADRID, Jan. 24.—(AP)—A policeman was killed and five merrymakers wounded as the government massed military and police forces today to cope with a threatened general strike tomorrow intended to establish a proletarian distatorship.

The policeman was killed in a fight with communists in a suburb of Barcelona. Two children, a woman and two men were wounded in a plaza of Barcelona itself when police charged a crowd of laborers who had sought to break up a native dance.

Publication in the official gazette of the new decree dissolving the Jesuit order in Spain and giving the Jesuits ten days to disband their chapters seemed to soothe the left wing spirits. The government was hopeful its display of force would forestall any serious movement tomorrow, but was taking no chances.

Action Angers Pope.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VATICAN CITY, Jan. 24.—Spain's action in disbanding the Jesuits of Spain and confiscating the order's property drew severe protests from Pope Pius today. He characterized the banishment of the Jesuits as an act of "terrible impiety."

In addressing the ecclesiastics, the pontiff glorified the Jesuits of Spain as "martyrs of the papacy, martyrs of the pope, martyrs of the vicar of Christ."

He bade the Jesuits to take consolation from the fact that they were placed in the same position as the apostles of old.

Expresses His Gratitude.

"It is precisely for their faithfulness to the holy see that they are being made to suffer and we are happy to proclaim our fatherly gratitude," he said.

The report of this new Spanish decree, said the pope, were more discouraging from the fact that it comes at the same time of the saddening news from Russia, and the ever more saddening news from "poor Mexico."

Pope Pious spoke of the dire state of religion in these three countries today on the occasion of the ceremonies proclaiming the heroic virtues of the venerable Vincenzo Pallotti, the founder of the "Pious Society of Missions."

BOY SLAIN AS HE PEDDLES NAZI BILLS IN BERLIN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

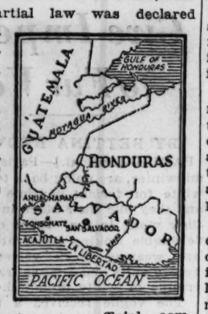
BERLIN, Jan. 24.—Herbert Norkus, 16 years old, was stabbed to death today while distributing Fascist handbills in one of the poorer districts of Berlin. He, with six other students, was handing out the propaganda sheets when he was attacked by a group of socialists and communists enraged by the invasion of the socialist district.

The "Neue Montag's Zeitung," a newspaper that leans toward the communist party, asserts that Gen. Wilhelm Groener, minister of defense and the last quartermaster general of the army of the former kaiser, will be backed by the socialists and bourgeois parties as their candidate for the German presidency to replace President Von Hindenburg.

Youth Held as Thief Escapes as Bullets Fly

Joseph Lupo, 17 years old, 1735 North Laramie avenue, escaped in a rain of bullets from a police squad from the Austin station last night after he had been arrested on a charge of stealing an automobile. The car had been involved in a crash at Forest and Augusta avenues, Oak Park, during the afternoon. The Oak Park police apprehended him as he was fleeing from the scene. He was turned over to the Austin police when it was learned the car had been stolen in that district. His successful break for freedom was made when the squad halted to view the wrecked car in a garage at 6349 West North avenue.

'Red Hordes' of Salvador Flee When Soldiers Defeat Rebels



SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Martial law was declared throughout Salvador today in a determination to put down communist uprisings in which a number of persons have been killed.

"Red hordes" provoked disorders in several towns of the interior, an official communique said. The mayor, municipal secretary, local army commandant and a telegrapher were killed at Colon, in the department of La Libertad.

Strong bands of communists attacked the barracks at Ahuachapana and Sonsonate, and burned several houses at Juayua. Troops, meeting strong resistance at Sonsonate, fired on the communists, killing and wounding an undetermined number. Others were captured.

Planned "Reign of Terror."

The government accused the communists of attempting to instigate a reign of terror, with the intention of killing the "bourgeoisie." As a result, all persons holding private permits to carry guns have been authorized to defend themselves with arms, if necessary.

The cabinet met and said the communist trouble ran throughout this tiny Central American republic. It extended martial law, which had been applied to one zone last Wednesday, throughout the country as part of its announced determination to maintain public order.

Offenders, it said, would be imprisoned and punished. The communist offensive was repulsed at all points, including Santa Tecla, it added, and loyal troops were pursuing the communistic bands.

U. S. Marines Near Republic.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—(AP)—Carrying 115 marines ready to land if necessary to protect foreign lives and property, three American warships are speeding for the Central American republic of El Salvador where communistic rioting has spread terror.

They are the cruiser Rochester, flagship of Rear Admiral Smith, commander of the Panama Special Service squadron, and the destroyers Philip and Wickes.

The destroyers are scheduled to arrive off the west coast of the troubled republic Monday at 9 a. m. The Rochester, a slower craft, will arrive Wednesday at 11 p. m. The destroyers increased their speed today from 20 to 25 knots.

Canadian Ships in Port.

Officials presumed that two Canadian destroyers, the Skeena and Vancouver, already are in the port of Acajutla. They were en route from the Canadian west coast to the Atlantic when word was flashed of the uprisings.

The British embassy also notified the state department one of its cruisers was heading toward El Salvador, but no word has been received as to whether it has reached port.

3 Baltic Nations to Plan Economic Union at Parley

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, Jan. 24.—Addressing the Latvian Foreign Press association at a luncheon, Foreign Minister Karl Sarin announced that during February Latvia, Estonia, and Lithuania will hold a conference in Riga to discuss the establishing of credits, lower customs, and to take steps toward an economic union of these countries.

Birger Ruud, who won the title as the most graceful ski rider in Europe last year, and is a member of Norway's Olympic skiing team, captured the class A championship at the Ogden Dunes Ski club's fifth annual meet yesterday. Ten thousand gathered on the club's grounds in the Indiana sand dunes to watch Ruud establish a new slide record.

Birger, brother of Sigmund Ruud, holder of the world's distance mark of 276 feet, leaped 176 feet in his first attempt on the tall steel slide, and in his second trial landed on the 195 foot mark of the hill in perfect form. The old record of 169 feet was set by Casper Oimen, national champion, who will represent the United States in the Olympic winter games in Lake Placid, N. Y.

Walberg Second, Beck Third.

Sigmund also scored two jumps which bettered Oimen's record, leaping 170 and 182 feet. But two of his teammates, Hans Beck and Kaare Walberg, who also made record breaking jumps, were rated ahead of him.

Walberg, winner of the Norge Ski club championship last week, took second place with jumps of 182 and 181 feet. Beck captured third place by jumping 183 and 185. Although Beck leaped farther than Walberg in both attempts, Walberg was awarded second place because of his perfect form.

The Class B championship was won by Ole Besseberg of the Ogden Dunes Ski club of Chicago, when he jumped 139 and 153 feet. Rudolph Gundersen of the Norge Ski club was second and Al Johnson, Racine, Wis., was third.

A strong northwest wind threw back the skiers as they left the take-off of the slide which is 595 feet long. However, there were few spills on the hill in the class A tournament. Gunnar Oman and Reidar Andersen tumbled and were eliminated after beating the old record. Oman, representing the Ogden Dunes club, fell after a leap of 181 feet. In his second attempt he jumped 173 feet.

Wind Prevents U. S. Record.

The snow, imported from Givitz, Wis., was packed heavily on the slide and hill, and the skiers in the meet were of the opinion that a new national amateur record would have been set but for the strong wind. The present record is 212 feet, made by Guttorm Paulsen of the Norge Ski club of Chicago at Steamboat Springs, Colo., last year.

Paulsen, whose fall in the Norge Ski club's meet last week after jumping 180 feet spoiled his chances against the Norwegians, leaped 175 feet in his first attempt yesterday and 132 in his second.

Two other members of Norway's Olympic squad also shattered the Ogden Dunes slide record—Hans Kleppen and Sverre Kolterud. Kleppen, who competed in the 1928 Olympics, soared 174 feet with perfect form in his first attempt, but fell when he landed on the 182 foot mark in his second trial. Kolterud turned in a 167 foot jump and later leaped 184 feet.

SETS CANTON RECORD.

Canton, S. D., Jan. 24.—(AP)—Record breaking performances marked the 11th annual ski tournament of the Sioux Valley club here today. The hill mark of 183 feet was beaten seven times.

A record of 192 feet for the slide was set by Sverre Fredheim, Norwegian-American Ski club, Minneapolis, after a battle with Roy Mikkelsen of Chicago, who started the record smashing with a leap of 185 feet. Both Mikkelsen and Fredheim exceeded the old mark twice, but the Chicagoan's best leap was 190 feet.

BRICKLAYERS WIN FROM MAC DUFF SOCCER TEAM, 5-0

The Bricklayers, who are still in the running for the national soccer title, had an easy time winning, 5 to 0, from the MacDuffs of the Major league at 47th avenue and 19th street yesterday.

In another one sided contest the Maccabees All Stars of the National league won from the Carpenters of the same circuit, 7 to 0, at Kuppenheimer stadium. A. Robb, new Maccabee player, was the leading goal scorer of the day, finding the net three times from the outside left position.

OVER THE HILL TO SKI RECORD

Birger Ruud, representing Norway's Olympic winter sports team, soars to a hill record of 195 feet in the Ogden Dunes Ski club's fifth annual meet yesterday. The Norwegian leaped 176 feet in his first attempt, which also bettered the former mark of 169 feet, and was awarded first place in the class A competition. A crowd of 10,000 attended. Ballast Man on Bobsled— There's Job for Some Husky!

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 24.—The Olympic winter sport of sliding down a mountain on a bobsled has caught this country unawares, and one hears many inquiries about the qualifications necessary in a successful spare man or ballast man on a coasting team whose duty is merely to sit still in a large way while the pilot steers and the brakeman in the stern yanks the brake handle to whoa up the sled as it goes into the turns.

An extremely phlegmatic nature would seem to be one of the essentials, because once the slide begins the spare man's life is in the hands of his colleagues, and should he wriggle or indulge in anything like back seat driving, the bob would be likely to leap out into space or turn over.

Must Cultivate Restraint.

Inasmuch as some of these bobs weigh close on to a thousand pounds, mishaps of this kind are to be scrupulously avoided and the spare man must cultivate restraint. If he fails in his great duty to do absolutely nothing the bobsled may land all over himself and his companions, and the weight and general construction of the sleds suggest that this experience would be something like catching a locomotive in one's lap.

Bodsleds have turned over ere this on Mount Van Hoevenberg, the Olympic slide at Lake Placid, and on the mountain runs in Switzerland and Germany, and the crews generally have reported for some days afterward that they did not feel at all well. In fact, some few of them have never felt anything any more, but their relatives have felt very sad; so it is all right to risk a general statement that it is inadvisable to turn over on a bob run.

A Notable Sitting Job.

Sedentarism has reached a high development in several sports, notably checkers and chess, and, hoping that I do not irritate an old wound, I must say that Gene Tunney did a very notable job of impromptu sitting down in the seventh round of his boxing match with Jack Dempsey in Chicago, his countenance registering that utter detachment which seems so desirable in a bobsled sitter. But the mood passed, and that was where a good judge of bobsled sitters would have disqualified Tunney for Olympic competition.

The game of auction bridge also has done much to develop the sport of sitting in this country, but there is this flaw in bridge sitting that the sitters get up from time to time when they are dummy to step over to the sandwich and cocktail table or to reach across the table and wham somebody on the nose. Moreover, in this game, as the recent world series between the two systems in New York demonstrated, there is little or no trust or confidence in any one, so it would appear to cultivate the wrong psychology for bobsled work. It would not do for the member of a bobsled crew to wham another on the slide.

Large Physique Desirable.

Another essential is a large physique with 200 pounds as the desirable minimum, and the ballast or spare man should be somewhat fluid or bluppy, because his weight should shift from side to side of the cockpit, according to the angle, without conscious effort on his part. For this position I can suggest no better physique than the one which my friend, Louie Comiskey, the present owner of the White Sox, has been carting around for a number of years. Besides a body of fine proportions, Mr. Comiskey has other qualifications. He is a gentle soul and kindly and a believer in the idea that a man can't live forever, so what the hell?

I can fancy him slipping down the slide, diligently sitting in the middle and flowing from side to side of the machine, accommodating himself to the angle of the incline, his billows ballasting the sled like the water in the equilibrium tanks of a ship, and whooping a joyous how do you do to this world and the hereafter, if any, with never a word of criticism to the steersman nor the man at the brakes.

Foursome by Himself.

My association with Mr. Comiskey has been rather extensive but not sufficiently so. He is so extensive himself that it takes a long time to know him well. On a golf course, Lou Comiskey is a single handed foursome.

And—this may be slightly irrevelant—I shall always remember the time in Shreveport, La., when his ball club was down there training when he sor-

HOWARD'S GYM TEAM OUT TO WIN GOLDEN GLOVES

The battle for Golden Gloves begins three weeks from tonight at the Ashland Boulevard auditorium. There the amateur boxers of Chicago's west side will gather for a two day tourney to determine the qualifiers for the Tournament of Champions.

But more important for these lads, who seek a place on the intercity squad which meets New York in Madison Square Garden, is the date for the closing of entries. No entries for the west side eliminations will be accepted after midnight, Feb. 8, two weeks from tonight.

File Your Entry Today.

Those who will box in the north and south side tournaments will have a few days more leeway in filing their names. However, there is no reason for delay. Clip the entry blank which appears daily in these columns and mail it to Wilfrid Smith, sports department, CHICAGO TRIBUNE. The dates of the Chicago qualifying tournaments and dates for the closing of entries follow:

West Side	Feb. 15-16	Feb. 8
North Side	Feb. 18-19	Feb. 11
South Side	Feb. 22-23-24	Feb. 15

Team entries may be made in a group if all information is certified by the manager. Each amateur boxer must be registered with the Central association of the A. A. U., under whose sanction the Golden Gloves bouts are held. The registration with the A. A. U. may be made, however, after entry in the tournament. For information on A. A. U. registration write to Roy E. Davis, 538 South Dearborn street, Chicago. There is no fee for entering Golden Gloves.

Howard Team Holds Trophy.

The Arcade gymnasium team, coached by Howard Carr, familiarly known as Kid Howard, won the team trophy last year by carrying away honors on the final night. And if one is to believe the Kid, his boys are going to repeat this year.

Last year more than 750 boys registered for the Chicago sectionals. It is believed that this number will be exceeded this year.

BY CHARLES NEVADA.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Oconomowoc, Wis., Jan. 24.—Four of the five national outdoor ice skating champions crowned on a mill pond near here today were Chicagoans. James Webster, veteran St. Paul skater, was the only non-Chicagoan in the column of major winners. He won the final event, the five mile race.

A third place gave him the senior crown with a point total of 80 for the two day competition, which opened yesterday. Art Peters, Chicago, was second to Webster, with 70. He was the leader at the halfway mark with 50 points.

Helen Bina Mounts Throne.

Helen Bina, Chicago girl, succeeded Loretta Neitzel, Detroit, as the queen of the women skaters with a total of 60 points. A special 1,000 meters race victory gave Miss Bina the title, as her total of 50 corresponded with that of Kitty Klein, Buffalo, N. Y., entry. Miss Klein fouled in the special event and was disqualified.

Wilbur Marks of Chicago was the class of the intermediates with 120 points. Leo Freisinger led the juniors with 120 and Robert Sherman showed the way for the juveniles with 80.

The scramble for the men's title was closely contested with Webster, Peters, Harry Kaskey, Stundl and Mel Johnson, the latter of Detroit, all ranking as contenders. A victory for any one of the five in the five mile would have clinched it. Kaskey finished second to John Bretz, St. Louis, a comparative unknown, who won in 17:07.4.

Ted Keohane, Chicago, captured the lap prize for this event by crossing the finish line eight times ahead of the field. He showed the way until the four mile point, when he surrendered in favor of Ty Smith, Buffalo, N. Y.

Thrills in Special Race.

The most thrilling event was the special 1,000 meters race between the Misses Bina and Klein to determine the women's championship. Miss Klein took an early lead and held it until the final 50 yards. At this point, when Miss Bina was about to pass her, Miss Klein, the judges ruled, locked one arm around Helen. Both fell and the race was forfeited to the Chicagoan.

Officials said that the boys' intermediate three-quarters mile mark, set yesterday by Flickinger, establishes a new American record for the distance

Schaefer Gets Idea of This 3-Cushion Game; Beats Reiselt

BY FRENCH LANE.

Jake Schaefer, world's champion at balkline billiards, made some headway toward capturing the world's three cushion championship last night at Mussey Recreation.

TIFF DENTON.

He became complete master of the ivories, made shots that bewildered the three cushion fans, nursed the balls around as if they were so many obedient servants, and beat Otto Reiselt of Philadelphia, 50 to 31, in 40 innings. It was the first defeat Reiselt had suffered and it sent him flip flopping into a tie for second place. At the same time Augie Kieckhefer, who was idle, became the undisputed leader in the race for the title. Kieckhefer has won three games and he hasn't been beaten.

Two Favorites Tumble.

Schaefer became one of the great heroes of the three cushion championship tournament when he overthrew Reiselt. For Reiselt was the 1 to 3 favorite when the game opened, and most of the folks in the tiny amphitheater thought he was unbeatable.

They had forgotten all about the way the Schaefers for two generations have played billiards. They had forgotten that a favorite could be beaten in this difficult game, despite Johnny Layton's trimming at the hands of Tiff Denton a short time earlier when Layton was a 1 to 2 choice.

Until last night Schaefer had looked like a stranger in a strange man's land. He appeared hopeless in his earlier games as the old masters of the three cushions had left him one difficult shot after another.

Maybe He's Wrong—Maybe.

In his battle against Reiselt he played unorthodox three cushion billiards. He went after shots that made his three cushion rivals smile and shake their heads, as if they wanted to say, "Isn't it too bad?"

But those smiles on the faces of the three cushion stars soon vanished. For Schaefer was making the billiards at which he seemed to be shooting in the wrong direction. His old time balk line confidence was back with him.

He rushed Reiselt, one of the greatest "goat getters" and one of the calmest players in the three cushion game, off his feet. Young Jake scored twelve billiards in the first four innings and he was leading, 12 to 1. It is too bad the daddy of Young Jake couldn't have watched the boy perform.

The crowd which had assembled to cheer Reiselt and which was there to sympathize with Schaefer suddenly realized that the king of the balkliners had hit his true stride. He had shifted overnight into one of the greatest three cushion players old time Chicago fans had ever seen.

Layton, 1-2 Choice, Loses.

Only a few folks from down in the Ozark razorback country were on hand to cheer when Denton beat Layton, 50-46, in 57 innings.

There was a reason for all the si-

Nevers' Arm Broken; Wins His Last Game

The accident occurred during the Knights of Columbus charity game between Nevers' team and Frank Carideo's All Stars, which Nevers' team won, 26 to 14. A crowd of 40,000 saw the contest.

"I received the last kickoff and after being tackled thrust out my left hand to break the fall when it happened," Nevers explained. "I'm through with football and with professional baseball, too. I'm going to devote my time to private business."

"In the dressing room before we started play Nevers told us it was his last game," said Harry Ebding, former St. Mary's star. "He said he wanted to make a showing, and, by golly, he did."

Behind a strong line Nevers, aided by Rose and Belden, who were his teammates on the Chicago Cardinal pro eleven, pounded the Carideo line for four touchdowns on marches of 60, 14, 45, and 20 yards. Nevers made every point for his team.

GOOD HOCKEY REPLACES FIST FIGHTS ON ICE

It's an Innovation, but It Works.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Seventy-four hundred persons, many of them, no doubt, lovers of fisticuffs, attended the Shamrock-Buffalo Majors hockey contest at the Chicago Stadium last evening. The Shamrocks violated two precedents in the presence of these customers—they did none of the customary fist or stick fighting and they actually won a hockey game, and right handily, too. The score was Chicago, 3; Buffalo, 0.

The contest had none of the drama, hilarity, gore, or wickedness of the Shamrock game with the St. Louis Fliers last Thursday night. But it's something to win a hockey game, folks, even if it was only over dear old Buffalo.

The Patient May Recover.

Of course, anybody can beat dear old Buffalo, but there was a certain snappiness about the Shamrocks in the game that indicated they may have returned to earth.

The panic that has been raging in the Shamrock front office, causing hundreds of square yards of frosted glass to be kicked out of the frames of the executive lair, seemed to have subsided even before the soothing victory.

For instance, Goalie Mike Karakas was back at his old job. Young Mike's skates has been booted from under him by executive edict. One Paddy Byrne was pushed into Mike's job while Manager Babe Dye was out to supper, or some place, and things were pretty flighty generally.

One Big, Happy Family.

But last night, ah, folks, everything was just dandy again. Karakas embarrassed the front office executives by playing a bang up game. And the other players quit fighting and scored goals. What could be sweeter?

Though the first period was rather listless, the effort which enabled the Shamrocks to score was a neat matter. In 2:22 McFadyen took the puck out of the Shamrock defense zone, where it had been most of the time through the first two minutes.

As Donnie crossed his own blue line near the left boards, he passed to Johnson in center ice and Ade broke straight for the cage without successful hindrance from the Majors. When he got close enough to Goalie Stark's toes, he jabbed over the goal.

Shamrocks Get 2 More.

The Shamrocks made their other two goals in the second period, one on a clicking team play and the other on a drifter that Goalie Stark lost in the sun.

The technique of the first was not unlike that which accomplished the marker in the preceding period. McFadyen again was the passer. This time he passed to Brydson and Gordie's success and grace in skating straight to the cage for the goal was reminiscent of Johnson's behavior in the earlier instance. The time was 2:46.

Prelesnik scored the aforementioned drifter. He got a loose puck far from the cage and swished it for luck. Goalie Stark did not seem to perceive the missile in its long flight. At any rate it sailed into the net in 15:45.

NORTH CENTRAL FINDS COLLEGES VIOLATE RULES

Reports on various colleges of the North Central association were studied by the board of review of the association at a meeting yesterday at the Stevens hotel. Recommendations will be made by the board at the regular meeting of the association in Chicago March 17.

According to H. M. Gage of Cedar Rapids, Ia., chairman of the board, particular attention is being directed towards the subsidizing of athletes at certain colleges. Gage declared that violation of the rules was disclosed in 10 schools out of 75 investigated. The reports will not be made public until March.

WEEK'S SCHEDULE.
Thursday—Michigan at Ohio State.
Saturday—Chicago at Minnesota.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

The Western conference basketball race has reached the midsemester mark with Northwestern, 1931 champion, leading with six victories and no defeats. While the Wildcats are the only undefeated team, their record, which includes three one point victories, may go to smash in the next half of the schedule.

Northwestern may be expected to defeat Indiana and Iowa, although that, of course, is not a certainty. Then comes the first of the series with Purdue, in which the Boilermakers, provided they have continued with only one defeat against them, may tie the race.

Northwestern's journey from that point will be full of obstacles. The Wildcats play Michigan at Ann Arbor and Ohio State at Columbus. Both were defeated by a point on the Patten gymnasium court. Northwestern concludes its schedule against Purdue at Evanston March 5.

Gophers' Schedule Easiest.

Three teams, Ohio State, Minnesota, and Purdue, have lost one game each. Theoretically they are tied for second position, although Purdue has won twice to three victories for the others.

Of these three, Minnesota has the easiest schedule. The Gophers already have divided games with Michigan. However, they have double bills with Illinois, and Wisconsin, and with Iowa. Single games remain with Indiana and Chicago.

Ohio State and Purdue meet twice, so one of the teams certainly will be eliminated. In addition, the Buckeyes face two games with Michigan and Chicago, and have return contests with Illinois and Northwestern. Purdue, besides the series with Northwestern and Ohio State, must play Illinois, the team which defeated the Boilermakers; Wisconsin, once; Chicago, twice, and Indiana, once.

Michigan Meets Ohio.

The elimination starts this week when Michigan plays Ohio State at Columbus on Thursday night. Michigan probably lost its best opportunity for the title when it succumbed to Minnesota Saturday night at Minneapolis, 30 to 26. On Saturday night of this week Chicago plays at Minnesota. The Maroons lost the first game with the Gophers, 22 to 14.

Illinois and Michigan are tied for fifth place in the standings with three victories and two defeats each. Illinois won its third game Saturday night by whipping Chicago, 30 to 20. Bennett, who scored 10 points for the Illini, jumped to fifth place in the individual scoring chart.

How Teams Stack Up.

	*G.	Av. P.	Av. O. P.
Northwestern	6	27 2-3	24 1-2
Ohio State	4	28 1-4	23 1-4
Minnesota	4	28 1-2	26 1-4
Purdue	3	36	26 2-3
Illinois	5	26 2-5	23 3-5
Michigan	5	25 1-5	22
Indiana	5	29	34 2-5
Wisconsin	5	23 3-5	27 4-5
Chicago	3	17 1-3	25 1-3
Iowa	4	23 1-4	31 3-4

Wolverines Lead in Defense.

Michigan has allowed only an average of 22 points per game to lead the conference in defense The others follow: Ohio State, Illinois, Northwestern, Chicago, Minnesota, Purdue, Wisconsin, Iowa and Indiana. It is interesting that Indiana ranks second in average points per game but last in points allowed.

Joe Reiff of Northwestern continues to lead the individual scoring records with 56 points in six games. Actually, he is behind other men on averages per game. Moffitt of Iowa has an average of 11¼ points for four games and Wooden of Purdue has averaged 11 1-3 points for three games.

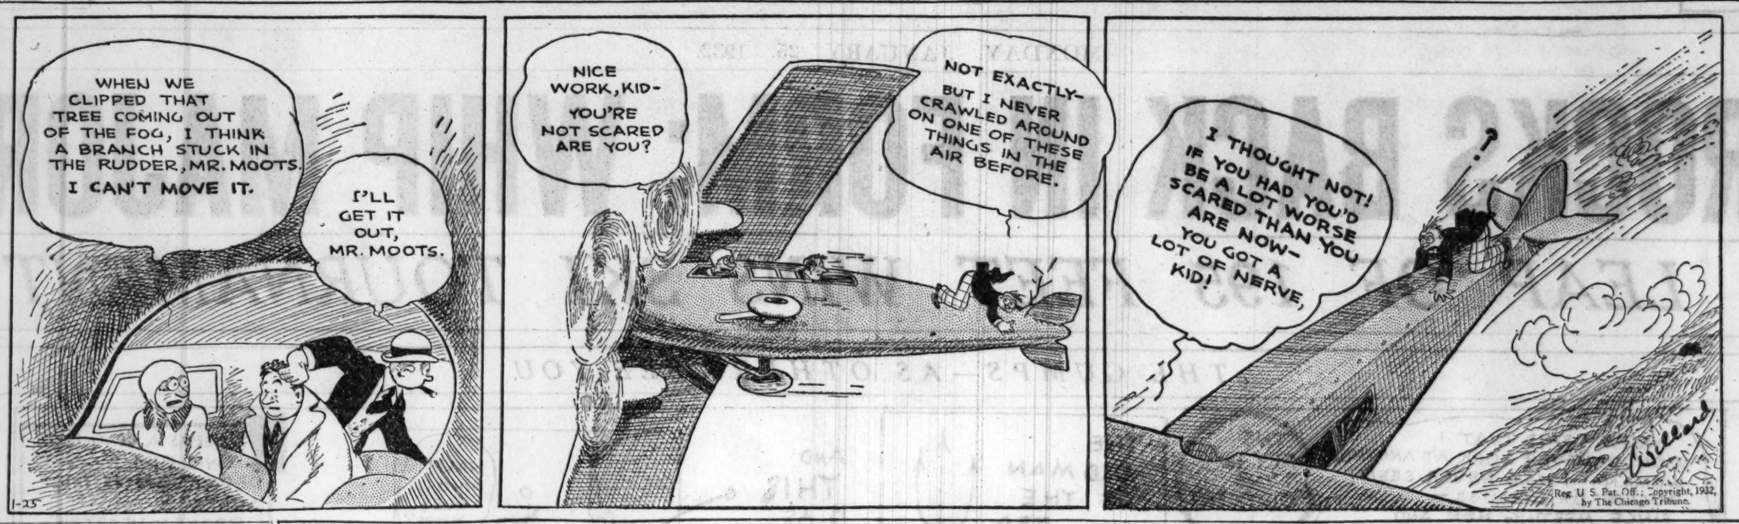
MOON MULLINS—RIDING ON THE RUMBLE SEAT



PANTALEO HOLDS 21 POUND EDGE IN BOUT TONIGHT

Baxter Calmes, Oklahoma City, Okla., and Paul Pantaleo, Chicago, headline Mique Malloy's six bout boxing show at White City tonight. The match is scheduled for ten rounds.

For Pantaleo the bout is just another battle, and if he wins he merely will have the satisfaction of beating a light heavyweight. But for Calmes it means much more. A victory over the 200 pound former Tilden High school athlete will pave the way for matches with leading heavyweights.

May Quit Light Heavies.

Pantaleo had his chances against Tuffy Griffith and Ernie Schaaf, and he can be called nothing by a trial horse for promising youngsters like Calmes. Although the Oklahoma City boxer has made 175 pounds three times and won his contests against Bob Olin, Mario Campi, and Roscoe Manning in the light heavyweight championship tournament, he has fought as a heavyweight with success.

Calmes defeated Con O'Kelly, Bud Doran, Nick Taft, Walter Madey, and Pete Wistort, all heavyweights. He held Dave Maier to a drew at Milwaukee last summer, and whipped Mickey McFarland as a 175 pound battler in another match. However, he said last night that he may quit the tournament and fight as a heavyweight hereafter.

Pantaleo 21 Pounds Heavier.

Calmes will weigh approximately 179 pounds, giving Pantaleo an advantage of about 21 pounds.

Costas Vassis of Greece will make his fourth Chicago start in the six round semi-final against Bobby Vernon at 160 pounds. He defeated Clyde Hull and Jud Judkins, and lost a decision to Bill Baker in his three bouts here. Biff Bennett, Fort Sheridan heavyweight, will seek to make amends for his knockout by Les Marriner when he faces Johnny Koranda in a four round bout. Three other four round matches round out the program.

Jake Schaefer Hands Reiselt First Defeat

lence, for as the game opened Layton was the 1 to 2 favorite. The chill was something like the coldness which silences a racing crowd when a short priced odds-on favorite is beaten.

The chill came right at the beginning when Denton opened the game with a run of five. Right away the people who had bet on Layton began to think their judgment had been bad. There was a heckler or two in the audience. Of course, Mr. Denton wouldn't import a couple of hecklers from down in the Ozarks just for a billiard game.

Johnny Catches Up.

But when those fellows up in the six-bit seats near the roof began to shout out, "What's the matter, Layton?" and "Go ahead and shoot, Johnny," it disturbed the old redhead from Sedalia who often has held the world's championship. He fumed and he fussed. He scowled up at the boisterous delegates as if he were certain they were from down in Denton's Ozark country.

As a result it took him 44 innings to catch up with Denton. He jumped into a lead at that point, 35 to 34. But Denton soon was out in front of him again.

In the 53d inning Layton got a cluster of six and was leading, 45 to 43. The folks who had backed him at 1 to 2 began to cheer. But that didn't affect the tall, slender Denton from the Ozarks. He got one in the 54th inning, he picked up five in the 56th, and scored the winning point in the 57th. It was the first triumph Denton had scored since the tournament opened. He was in his best stroke and made shots easily, while Layton, a victim of the breaks, missed 14 shots by less than 1-30th of an inch. Scores:

SMITTY—THE KIDS ARE GAME

B. Bozo of the Birmingham Bozos Bobs Up

Battling Bozo, Birmingham, Ala., will arrive in Chicago today to finish training for his ten round light heavyweight championship tournament bout against Billy Jones of Philadelphia at Chicago Stadium Thursday night.

Franta Nekolny, European welterweight champion, makes his fourth appearance in this country when he meets Jackie Brady of Detroit in another ten round match on the card, which is topped by the 147 pound title fight between Lou Brouillard, the champion, and Jackie Fields, ex-title holder.

Dave Maier, Baxter Calmes, Harry Ebbets, Lou Scozza and Harry Nichols, remaining contestants in the light heavyweight competition, breathed easier when Jones and Bozo were drawn against each other. They didn't mind boxing Bozo or Jones, but the prospect of being forced to face both of them was too much. Now, however, one or the other will be eliminated and 50 per cent of their rivals' worries are over.

Mickey Walker, a stablemate of Fields, wil take charge of Jackie's training today and began teaching him a few tricks about fighting southpaws.

Matchmaker Johnny Coulon has announced an all star card for the weekly boxing and wrestling show at Marigold Gardens, Broadway and Grace street tonight. Solly Dukelsky will meet Buddy Moore at 147 pounds, while Sam Bernstein is paired with Lynn Thompson at 122 pounds. Clarence Smith will face George Jonasen in a heavyweight wrestling match, and Barney Hassen is paired with Eddie Leonard at 133 pounds.

Ballast Man for Bobsled—There's a Job!

rowed for a local priest whose steeple had been carried away by a seasonal twister and dumped into one of the oily lakes in the pine woods. Mr. Comiskey generously offered to buy the reverend father a second hand steeple which he had seen in storage at a steeple works nearby.

Wrong Type of Steeple.

"But," said the reverend father, when they went out to inspect the used job, "that is a Protestant steeple—a Methodist steeple in fact."

Mr. Comiskey turned his car around and drove back to town, where he wrote a check for a brand new one, solving a delicate sectarian problem with a simple but expensive flourish of this pen.

This is the one sport, this bobsledding, in which the fat man comes into his own, with no trainer to tell him he must do nine miles around the reservoir tomorrow morning or swear off sweets and white bread. To develop an ambitious spare or ballast man for an Olympic team, a trainer would be more likely to stake him in close quarters like a Strasbourg goose and feed him much and forbid him the slightest exercise.

Good Training for Somebody.

I suppose the question will arise whether there is any future for a ballast man on a bobsled team in which he can exploit his propensity to sit still on a commercial basis. Offhand, it might seem that he could not, and yet what could be a better course of training for the professions of night watchman and crossing keeper?

It would be not half bad training for the judicial bench, too, and, as for the man who wishes one day to become a utility outfielder or city fireman, I can think of no course of preparation which would be more advisable than a career of sitting still, unconcerned and patient, on a bobsled with nothing to do and little likelihood of his ever having anything to do.

PLEA FOR REPEAL EXCEEDS DRYS' CLAMOR IN 1917

Curran Cites Figures to Back Up Claim.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—In a letter addressed to every senator and representative, Henry Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, contends that the demand for repeal of prohibition is more widely supported today than was the appeal for the prohibition amendment in 1917 which was voiced in a petition of ten million signatures and a memorial from one legislature, that of Oklahoma.

Nine States Repudiate Dry Law.

"1. Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New York, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Nevada have petitioned by referenda and also by legislative resolutions for relief from the prohibition amendment. These six states have a total population of 28,185,985, or 23.04 per cent of the country's population, and for the year ending June 30, 1930, paid in individual income taxes the sum of $531,357,860, or 55.54 per cent of the total national revenue from that source.

"2. Nine states — Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Maryland, Illinois, Wisconsin, Montana, and Nevada—have repudiated national prohibition by refusing to ratify the 18th amendment, declining to adopt enforcement laws or rescinding state enforcement acts. The population of these states total 31,961,930, or about one-fourth of the nation, and citizens therein paid $551,732,816, or 59.34 per cent of the total personal income taxes the federal treasury received for 1929-'30.

Cites Wet Victories at Polls.

"3. Pronounced opposition to national prohibition was shown in the 1930 elections in Ohio, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania by the election of Senator Bulkley over ex-Senator McCulloch by a vote of 1,046,561 to 863,944; the primary vote of 422,978 for the late Senator Morrow over ex-Senator Frelinghuysen and ex-Representative Fort, and the 1,010,204 votes rolled up by the repeal candidate, John M. Hemphill, against the dry Gifford Pinchot in the Pennsylvania gubernatorial contest. These states, added to the nine which have repudiated national prohibition, represent a population of 52,281,311, or 42.74 per cent of the country's total, and they paid 76.54 per cent, or $770,160,510 of the federal individual income taxes for the 1929-'30 period.

"4. In addition the legislatures of two states — Wyoming and Connecticut—have recently decreed that a referendum shall be held next November on prohibition; the American Bar association and the American Legion have gone on record overwhelmingly for repeal or submission of the question."

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Ah Ha!

U. S. WILL BEGIN SEAWAY BRIDGE HEARINGS TODAY

Act to Fix Clearance of Spans at Justice.

A public hearing to determine whether fixed highway bridges, with a clearance of 25 feet above city datum, will be permitted over the Des Plaines river, sanitary canal and Illinois and Michigan canal at Justice, will be held in the city council chambers beginning at 10 o'clock this morning.

When this hearing is concluded, another to determine whether operating machinery shall be installed on lift, bascule and swing bridges over the sanitary canal from the west fork of the south branch of the Chicago river to Lockport will begin. This will be the first of the hearings ordered by Secretary of War Hurley on all bridges over the waterway.

Question of Greater Clearance.

Bridges across the waterway below Lockport have been decreed unreasonable obstructions to navigation by the secretary of war and later hearings will determine whether greater clearances shall be provided.

The bridges over the waterway below Lockport, particularly four railway bridges, which have been called obstructions to navigation, will not prevent immediate utilization of the lakes to gulf system when the Illinois section is completed, about Oct. 15, since the new low type barges will pass under them.

Fixed bridges with a 25 foot clearance over the Sag channel at Blue Island have already been approved by a board of United States engineers which made the survey for proposed harbor and channel improvements in the Calumet area.

All Interests to Be Heard.

All railway, highway, and shipping interests will be given full opportunity to present their cases at the public hearings, which will be conducted by the army engineers.

The cost of operating bridges over the Chicago river in the loop vicinity increased last year despite a 33 per cent decrease in their openings and closings, according to Harbor Master William J. Lynch. The higher cost was attributed to salary increases given the bridge tenders in December, 1930.

Operation of the sixteen loop bridges cost $308,129 in 1931, as compared with $279,188 in 1930, and $275,060 in 1929. The cost of operating all Chicago's 55 bridges was $948,808 in 1931, against $876,686 in 1930, and $859,972 in 1929. The salary increase amounted to $15 a month for the tenders.

LITHUANIANS ASK GERMANS TO QUIT IN MEMEL ROW

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEMEL, Lithuania, Jan. 24.—The German members of the board of governors of the Memel territory—now called Little Lithuania following the putsch of nine years ago by which the Memel district was annexed to Lithuania—have been accused of secret negotiations with the German government at a massmeeting of Lithuanian residents who demanded that the Germans on the board resign.

It was alleged that the Germans were discriminating against Lithuanians and are hindering the work of the Lithuanian schools, and that some of the members of the board have made secret visits to Berlin asking for German support of their anti-Lithuanian activities.

The Germans deny these allegations and are complaining of interference by the Lithuanian government in Memel's autonomy, saying that the attempts of the Catholic country to impose its language and culture upon the district which is entirely Lutheran is causing trouble.

SLAYS PARENTS, SHOOTS BROTHER, PERILS ANOTHER

Fort Wayne, Ind., Jan. 24.—(AP)—Seized with an insane desire to kill members of his family, Walter Hoffman, 38, killed his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Martin N. Hoffman, both 60, at their farm home southeast of Fort Wayne this afternoon.

Hoffman also shot and wounded Ernest Hoffman, 20, a brother, but was overpowered when his revolver failed to fire as he attempted to shoot another brother, Oswald Hoffman.

At the Allen county jail Walter Hoffman refused to talk. He was held without bond for first degree murder.

At a hospital Ernest Hoffman told the story of the shooting. He said he was seated at the supper table and his mother was in the kitchen when Walter came into it, revolver in hand. Walter fired first at his mother, who fell with a bullet in her head.

Ernest then was shot in the chest. He is expected to recover.

Walter then dashed from the house, chased his father down the road, and shot him.

Walter then drove to a neighbor's home, where his brother Oswald lived. There he pointed the revolver at Oswald, but it failed to fire. Then he was seized and bound until officers arrived.

NATIONALIZATION OF INDUSTRY IS URUGUAY PLAN

[Copyright: 1932: By the Associated Press.]

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Jan. 24.—While other countries have experimented with national monopolies to insure foreign loans, Uruguay has nationalized one industry after another with domestic benefits as the objective.

Since the first monopolistic venture of Uruguay in 1911 the wisdom of state ownership has never been a major political issue. The leaders and the people of the republic are as single-minded in their approval of the program as in their approval of the government—and the country is one of two in South America [Colombia is the other] which has not participated in the Latin-American revolutionary wave of the last two years.

Uruguay's ventures into the sale of life insurance; the packing of meats; the manufacture of chemicals, electric power and cement; the refinement of petroleum and industrial alcohol; the operation of railways, hotels, casinos, and a cabaret, and the conduct of port services are in the hands of separate boards.

Autonomous Groups.

Each board is an autonomous group, collecting its own revenues, controlling its own expenditures, and taking whatever steps of expansion or retrenchment it deems wise. Members of the boards are accountable only to the elective national administrative council, which helps the President run the country. The council appoints them for four year terms.

Members of these boards and their subordinates, down to the least employé, receive a portion of profits, depending upon the importance of their posts and their length of service.

The national treasury, which expects ultimately to profit as Uruguay's program of monopolization matures, has not yet benefited from its investments in nationalization of industry, but neither has it been embarrassed by its expenditures in that direction.

In most fields the monopolies have met interest and repaid invested principal regularly and have had enough besides to expand steadily. One of the original objectives—the finding of new sources of national revenue—has been waived while Uruguayans reap what the government regards as compensatory benefits in improved service and lower prices.

Shows a Profit.

The first and oldest state monopoly, the National Insurance bank, has been the most profitable. Starting with minor branches and advancing steadily into the more lucrative fields of life, fire, and maritime insurance, it has shown a steadily favorable balance and has made some profits for the treasury. But Uruguay counts these of less importance than, for instance, the $500,000 recently distributed among holders of frost insurance policies after a late cold wave. The money is credited with having averted economic failure for scores of farmers.

The National Light and Power business also has a good record. It has lowered prices of electricity in and around Montevideo and has carried current to interior villages where government officials doubt that private enterprise would have ventured. Three years ago the electrical board paid $6,000,000 for the largest powerhouse in Uruguay. The fall of the peso lately has embarrassed the board, however, and it wishes it had floated first mortgage bonds instead of paying cash so its reserves would not be so depleted.

The only definitely unprofitable enterprise, officials say, has been the operation of some 600 miles of secondary rail lines, and this has not deterred the country from expectation of railway profits when larger private lines revert to the government.

Opinion of Former President.

"Contrary to general opinion the state is an excellent manager when ordinary business methods are applied," he told the Associated Press. "The state monopolies, whose good effects are now being felt, have prevented the annual exodus of large sums which have been used instead to benefit the commonwealth, placing Uruguay in a better position than any country in South America to resist the effects of the world economic crisis.

"Intelligent legislation gives workmen and administrative employés an interest in the progress of the monopolies by giving them bonuses from part of the profits earned. Strict rules govern promotion and prevent favoritism. After a long period of internal instability Uruguay realized the need of a program giving her a maximum of economic independence and preventing export of the national wealth in the form of dividends."

HARDWARE FIRM ENDS YEAR IN GOOD CONDITION

A comparison of returns for 1931 with records of recent years is decidedly unsatisfactory, but when compared with that of some other lines of business leaves much to be thankful for, declares Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co., wholesale hardware dealers, in the 1931 annual report.

Continuous employment has been given to nearly 1,000 house employés and salesmen. Operating economies have been effected and the company ends the year in a strong liquid condition with a large cash balance and no debts of consequence except bills in the course of payment and the usual reserves for taxes.

Gross earnings were $2,045,766 and net income $62,967. Total dividends of $2.75 were paid on 200,000 shares of stock. Surplus was reduced from $6,327,788 to $5,787,743. Current assets are $2,027,405 and current liabilities $397,525.

GETS APPOINTMENT.

The appointment of Ned E. Depinet as vice president in charge of distribution of RKO Radio and RKO-Pathe Pictures has been announced by Elram S. Brown, president of Radio-Keith-Orpheum corporation.

LONDONER SAYS GOOD HOUSING PAYS DIVIDENDS

Landlord of 50,000 Tells Results.

BY AL CHASE.

Claude M. Leigh of London, said to be the world's greatest landlord for workers, with 50,000 tenants either directly or through subletting on his rent rolls, made a flying visit yesterday to Chicago, the former home of his American wife, who was Myrtle Johnson. He was accompanied by Mrs. Leigh. He has been telling Detroit, Philadelphia, New York and other cities about his slum reclamation work in London in speeches delivered before various public bodies. His Chicago visit, however, was merely a personal one, to see friends, but he took time to tell about the work he has accomplished in London.

CLAUDE M. LEIGH. [Harrington (London) Photo.]

Mr. Leigh is managing director of the $5,000,000 Metropolitan Housing Corporation, Ltd., and also is identified with several other big housing projects in London. The Metropolitan was formed in 1929 and has been a huge success, earning 12 per cent annually on its capital stock and pays dividends of 7 per cent on its cumulative preference stock and 8 per cent on the ordinary shares.

This big English housing and reclamation development has developed rentals so low that even the unemployed can keep a roof over their head by using the government dole to pay rent. They drop as low as $8.18 a month. The average rental is $13.20 a month. And at that Mr. Leigh says their loss in rents is less than 1 per cent.

Reconditioning Is Keynote.

The keynote to Mr. Leigh's great success is reconditioning. This is used more in the sense of modernizing than in rebuilding. Not only are old tenements, two flat buildings and single family structures modernized but the home life of the tenant is also reconditioned through social service and example.

"We have model apartments for certain areas where we show the housewife modern sinks, bathrooms and other conveniences," said Mr. Leigh. "When a woman sees something she should have to make her life more complete and comfortable and wants it, we install it for her and charge her so much a month. Her neighbor sees it and she at once wants the same thing.

"In this way we raise the standard of living and at the same time improve our properties, for most of these things are permanent. At the social centers, too, various methods of better home living are taught. This, too, makes for better and more contented tenants and a better tenant means a better citizen."

Named After Chicagoan.

The Augusta Johnson Tenants' Social center, in Camberwell, is named after a Chicagoan, the mother of Mrs. Leigh. At this center personal contact with tenants is maintained by a matron who encourages the tenants to take pride in and improve their homes, thus creating better and healthier citizens and at the same time reducing overhead charges for repairs and administration. The center has classes for children in handicraft, cookery, sewing, carpentry, etc.

"Our developments are in all parts of London and have to do with all sizes and classes of buildings," said Mr. Leigh. "Some of our properties are leaseholds and some we own.

"We have 10,000 families paying direct rent to us. About 60 per cent of these have sublet some of their surplus space and so we have a total of 50,000 persons living in reconditioned quarters. We have 500 men working all the time rejuvenating properties.

"We've reconditioned whole slum areas and have kept many districts of only moderate quality from slipping down into the blighted bracket by changing the living habits and homes of the tenants.

Likes Yankee Drink.

Although Mr. Leigh declares that an Englishman always needs a whisky and soda as a night cap he admits he likes the Yankee ice cream soda and plenty of it.

"I drink several of 'em every day," he said. "Tracy Drake told the man at the Drake soda fountain to see that I got all I could drink and not to charge me for them."

And oddly enough, at that precise moment Mrs. Leigh opened the door and said: "Don't you want a chocolate soda?"

Trade Scales Tip in Favor of the Good

New York, Jan. 24.—(AP)—American business weighed the good and the bad in the week just ended and found the scales tipped a little in favor of the good.

While no striking gains were recorded in basic lines, moderate improvement was seen. For one thing, business leaders expressed encouragement over the nonpartisan determination of congress to give full coöperation to remedial programs of legislation; for another, there were distinctly encouraging signs that financial strain on several American business centers had passed; and, still another, there was definite tendency shown by important industrial leaders to concentrate their undivided attention on stimulating domestic business without giving more than passing study to the foreign outlook.

Commodity Index Dips.

While the commodity price indexes showed a small further decline, nine retail centers reported a healthier public reaction based on belief that existing prices for goods represent genuine values. While still cautious, buying nevertheless registered gains, according to the mercantile reviews.

More than $150,000,000 of money has now been welded into the weaker units in the nation's banking system, and this process has strengthened the credit structure throughout the entire country. Business has been a direct beneficiary of this process, which has been engineered by the National Credit corporation with the lifting of financial problems in several cities, credit has relaxed and added stimulus has been given to business turnover.

Aid from U. S.

Further benefit will be given to business, industrial leaders forecast, by the $2,000,000,000 Reconstruction Finance corporation which is expected to begin operations shortly. This giant government sponsored enterprise is expected to carry still further the efforts of the Railroad Credit corporation and of the National Credit corporation.

In recording last week's gains of business it was generally agreed that while they were of seasonal proportions they were distinctly in line with expectations. Business did better than merely hold its own.

Carloadings were moderately increased. Steel production increased to 28 per cent of capacity. While orders for materials from automobile manufacturers were still small, retail sales of leading motor companies continued to show favorable comparison with last year.

Textile trade reports were somewhat mixed with continued good business reported in cotton textiles and knit goods. The silk industry was helped by firming of the Japanese yen. Wool textiles, however, suffered from further weakness of the price structure.

CLOTHING FIRM REPORTS LOSS OF $2,994,580

Expenses for the coming year will be much lower by reason of rigid economies that have been put into effect, Hart, Schaffner & Marx, clothing manufacturers, assert in announcing an operating loss of $2,994,580 for the fiscal year ending Nov. 28, 1931.

Unusual weather conditions, a buying slump due to the prevalent depression and substantial marking down of prices combined to restrict the company's business for the period, it was stated.

Dividends of $600,000 were paid out of surplus with the result that, including inventory adjustments, total surplus was reduced $4,426,507 to $7,245,461 from the previous year's total of $11,671,969.

For the fiscal year ending Nov. 29, 1930, the company had an operating profit of $1,503,141 of which $1,000,000 was set aside for contingent reserve. Net income after this deduction was equivalent to $3.36 a share on 150,000 shares of capital stock. Net profit in 1929 was $2,514,676, or $16.76 a share.

FIRM UNDERTONE REVIVES HOPES IN BOND MARKET

Further Improvement Is Predicted.

BY VICTOR EUBANK.

New York, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Although bond prices, under varying influences, closed last week fractionally lower, the firm undertone of the market gave encouragement to those investment circles which are predicting further improvement for listed loans.

The average for 60 corporate bonds on Jan. 18 was 76.3. Last Saturday this average had declined only two-tenths of a point to 76.1.

Conflicting News.

During the week there were conflicting news developments. The oversubscription of New York City's $100,000,000 note issue and the quick passage of the Reconstruction Finance corporation measure at Washington were viewed as constructive. At the same time delay of the Chicago railway wage reduction conference in reaching an agreement acted as a deterrent to transportation mortgages.

Railroad liens, however, held their own amid some tendency to relieve them of most of their previous gains. For the most part they gave up fractions only. It was pointed out by dealers that bonds of some of the roads were up from 10 to 40 points above their December lows. A few of the heavier advances were whittled down, but the majority of the lower priced loans clung tenaciously to the greater part of their higher quotations.

U. S. Liens Firmer.

Industrials and utilities did practically nothing during the week. United States government bonds sagged at first, but came back to a relative firmness. Foreign obligations, led by the Germans, weakened somewhat. South Americans, however, led by the Argentines and Uruguays, exhibited strength. Canadian bonds firmed.

Bank Clearings Improve; Still Below Last Year's

Bank clearings this week at a number of cities show a little improvement but in the aggregate continue considerably below those of a year ago. The total for all leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun's Review, of $5,781,983,000 is 23.7 per cent under that of last year. At New York City clearings were $4,007,999,000, a reduction of 21.6 per cent, while the aggregate for cities outside of New York of $1,773,984,000 shows a decline of 27.9 per cent. The reduction for the third week of January from the second week is less than $78,000,000, whereas a year ago it was in excess of $392,000,000.

ASK DISMISSAL OF INJUNCTION ENJOINING I. C. C.

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 24.—(AP)—A petition asking dismissal of an injunction suit to enjoin the carrying out of an interstate commerce commission order giving the Denver, Rio Grande and Western railroad permission to acquire control of the Moffat road has been presented in United States District court by Elmer B. Collins, a special assistant to the United States attorney general, who was among counsel for the defendants, the Denver, Rio Grande and Western and the commission.

The Moffat Tunnel League of Steamboat Springs, Colo., and the Uintah Basin Railroad League of Myton, Utah, had asked an injunction against the commission order on the ground that if the Denver, Rio Grande and Western acquired control of the Moffat road, a plan to build a railroad line through territory they have settled would be abandoned. They contended the territory was settled on a promise that the line would be built.

The petition for dismissal of the injunction suit stated the complainants represented owners of only a small part of the land affected by the proposed new line and that their legal interest was not sufficient to entitle them to bring suit in their own name. It conceded, however, that they would have the right to intervene in such an action.

PREMIUM GAINS SHOWN IN KEMPER INSURANCE GROUP

Figures just released by the three Chicago insurance companies in the James S. Kemper group show a total increase in premium income for 1931 over 1930 of $1,313,987.

The Lumbermen's Mutual Casualty company, which in 1930 had the largest premium income of any Illinois insurance company, again increased its premium income making a gain of $657,165 to a total of $14,307,236.

The American Motorists' Insurance company had a premium increase of $532,376 to a total of $3,615,378. The National Retailers' Mutual Insurance company had an increase of $124,447 to a total of $931,300.

The three companies made an increase in automobile premium income of $2,634,837, or approximately 25 per cent more than the automobile insurance premiums for 1930.

Commenting on the results, President James S. Kemper said, "We are, of course, immensely gratified at being able to show an increase in each of the companies, notwithstanding the general business situation. Our compensation premiums were reduced approximately a million and a half from last year due to lower pay rolls, although we added more new compensation policyholders than in any year of our history.

Soo Line System Reports $708,863 December Deficit

A net deficit of $708,863 for December, 1931, is reported by the Soo line railroad system as compared with a net deficit of $849,099 for the month of December, 1930.

For the 12 months of 1931 ending Dec. 31, the net deficit was $6,977,646, compared with $2,978,322 in 1930.

Total revenues for December, 1931, were $1,730,563, compared with $2,419,133 for December, 1930. Total expense were $1,591,995, compared with $2,296,106.

Ask Support for Financing of Gov't Corp.

BY O. A. MATHER.

An appeal to banks and dealers in investment securities in the middle west to support the government's financing for the Reconstruction Finance corporation was sent out last night by the Chicago Federal Reserve bank, which will receive subscriptions for the new treasury obligations.

The letter suggests that the United States treasury will not issue any long-term bonds, either for the purpose of subscribing its $500,000,000 to the new corporation or for meeting current needs. In particular, banks are urged not to subscribe for the new issues merely in order to gain treasury deposits but are asked to hold them.

Cites Financing Plans.

"It is our understanding from the treasury that in current financing operations the treasury proposes to adapt new issues as closely as possible to market conditions," the letter says. "While no definite assurance can be given, this probably means that for the present treasury financing will be through the medium of short term issues. We also understand that there is no immediate intention on the part of the treasury of raising the interest rate paid on treasury balances and that it is hoped that treasury balances with subscribing banks may be kept somewhat longer than has been the recent practice.

"We hope that during this period of emergency, subscribing banks will not subscribe for the purpose of obtaining deposits and immediately offer the securities on the market, thus tending to depreciate the value of all government securities.

"The President and the secretary of the treasury have both stated that it is the purpose of the administration so to bring the budget into balance beginning July 1, next, as to prevent any further increase in the public debt after that date. The President stated in part as follows: 'With this program we are thus assured that we can maintain the full stability and credit of the federal government by no increase in the public debt after covering the deficit of this fiscal year and no further increase after the first of next July.'"

Amount of Borrowing.

"Secretary Mellon stated to the ways and means committee that the amount of government borrowing, outside of refunding operations, to cover current expenditures during the balance of this fiscal year and the President's emergency program would in all probability not exceed 1½ billion dollars. Mr. Mellon stated as follows:

"'The greater part of the present fiscal year has already elapsed and it is impossible to avoid a large deficit for this year. To cover, for the balance of this fiscal year, all expenditures already authorized and appropriated for as well as those called for by the administration's special emergency relief program, will probably require increase in the public debt by $1,500,000,000, less any amounts to be derived in the current year through additional taxation. The administration is determined, with your coöperation, to arrest this borrowing process on June 30 next. I am confident that the attainment of this objective will have the full support of congress.'"

PLANS SCRIP TO PAY FOREIGN DEBT INTEREST

Bogota, Colombia, Jan. 24.—(AP)—President Olaya Herrera announced today his government had agreed to pay in scrip the interest on foreign debts of various departments and municipalities.

"In order to guard her future, aside from ethical and moral obligations, Colombia is interested in the highest degree in making every possible effort to fulfill honorably and in the fullest measure of fiscal and economic possibilities the obligations contracted with its creditors," the president said.

"If the country is to develop and elevate its standard of living, it must in the near future ask the backing of more foreign capital, which it could not easily obtain, even though the financial world returns to normal, unless it demonstrates that it has made every possible effort in times of depression to meet its obligations.

GRAIN TRADERS SEE COMMODITY PRICE ADVANCE

Believe Gov't Relief Plan Will Help.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Grain interests are looking forward to a possible betterment in commodity and stock markets, as well as in all other lines of business as a result of the passage of the reconstruction act which makes $2,000,000,000 of government money available to business interests.

While the optimism is most pronounced, there is also a feeling in certain quarters that possibly a great increase in speculative movements with commodities as the basis may not come as soon or reach as far as many expect.

Conditions generally are considered ripe for an upturn, with prices down to a minimum, and with almost all lines of trade in better shape for a ready response to any enlargement in buying power. There are ample supplies of farm products, and comparatively small stocks of manufactured goods, and with labor liquidating, a more progressive disposition is becoming apparent.

In the wheat situation, however, pessimism rather than optimism exists the world over, owing to large supplies and low prices. Consumption, it is claimed, has been increased by the latter, but importing Europe, being well informed on the world's situation, continues its policy of buying only as required and evinces no real disposition to change.

Eastern Buyers a Factor.

Strong eastern interests who evidently have tired of stocks took hold of the wheat market believing that by giving assistance to the buying side of wheat they would be able to advance prices on the theory that all constructive movements to be healthy must start in wheat. Their purchases in October, when prices were the lowest known, were largely responsible for the advance of 25c, with May wheat reaching 73c. They had the support of the outside speculative trade then, but at present the outsiders have not come into the market, and should prices be advanced materially it will require more extensive buying by trade leaders than has developed in a long time.

Taking another view of the world's wheat situation, considering it from supply and demand standpoint, there will have to be a greatly increased consumption and reduced production to put the market on a healthy basis. Wheat statistics are bearish. Argen-

NATIONAL WEALTH OF UNITED STATES IN '30 IS 329 BILLIONS

New York, Jan. 24.—(AP)—The total national wealth of the United States in 1930 was $329,700,000,000 the national industrial conference board said today.

The total national income for the same year was $71,000,000,000.

If, the board said, these sums could have been distributed equally among all the families in the nation, each family would have had $10,961 of capital and $2,366 of income.

The total wealth—tangible, physical assets—fell $32,100,000,000, or 8.9 per cent, from 1929; while income—representing the sum of personal income of all individuals in the country, plus business savings—dropped $14,000,000,000, or 16.4 per cent.

The board's estimate of wealth and income is the only regular and comprehensive similar research now being made. The last estimate of the United States census showed national wealth of $320,800,000,000.

The per capita wealth in 1930 was $2,677 as compared with $2,977 in 1929: and the per capita income was $578 in 1930 as compared with $701 in 1929.

The wealth per gainful worker was $6,728 in 1930, and his income was $1,452. The term "gainful worker" excludes, for instance, women engaged in household tasks without specific pay, and children.

Among states, Nevada had the greatest per capita wealth with $5,985; Wyoming was second with $4,480, and South Dakota was third with $4,356. Mississippi was last with $1,110. Similar detailed figures for national income are not yet available.

LOANS RECALL PREVIOUS HARD TIME PERIODS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 24.—Two incidents of last week were of a character to cause interesting and not uninstructive reminiscence. With each the nature of the occurrence and the circumstances which occasioned it revived in a peculiar way the memory of other chapters of hard times. The $100,000,000 New York City loan brought back strongly to mind the picture of the "war panic" of 1914, the enactment of the Reconstruction Finance corporation made the darkest period of 1921 seem like yesterday.

When another $100,000,000 New York City loan, running one to three years, and bearing 6 per cent interest, was subscribed by our bankers and willingly taken by our investment public in September, 1914, the prevalent financial atmosphere was one of black despair.

Every country except America and Japan had proclaimed inability to pay its maturing debts until some future and undetermined date. Only the indefinite closing of our stock exchange, along with every other stock exchange in the world, seemed to stand in the way of the instantaneous "unloading" on our market of the $2,700,000,000 American securities held abroad. To the financial community, it seemed that if the end of all things had not already come it was very near.

A Sight of Realities.

The subscription to the New York City loan of 1914 gave an unexpected sight of the realities behind this alarming situation. Thereafter even the "outlaw market" on the new street curb began to reflect the stability which foreshadowed the course of things when the stock exchange itself reopened.

In August, 1921, when the war finance corporation law was by congressional amendment adjusted to meet the needs of a peace time rather than a war time crisis, staple prices had fallen 44 per cent in fifteen months, or 12 per cent further than the decline from the highest of 1929 to the lowest of 1931. The disordered stock market appeared to reflect with accuracy the state of business, which was emphasized by the smallest iron production in eighteen years and by large company failures on the one

CHAIN CONCERN FINANCES SEEN IN GOOD SHAPE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 24.—Numerous independent surveys have convinced many bankers and large investors in the financial world that many of the leading chain store companies have placed themselves in the position to make relatively excellent showing during the current year.

For the business itself, many now believe that the crisis of the depression has been successfully passed and that, regardless of what may happen to general economic conditions, the business falling to the various chains will be more fully reflected in net earnings at the end of the year.

Some leaders in the industry, as well as various bankers, predict that there will be cases where the 1932 performance of companies will be the best in their history, not from total sales, but from percentage of profit for each dollar of sales.

Slow Up Expansion.

Most of the companies, it is now believed, have brought to a halt the movement which was resulting in the creation of thousands of new stores each year. Some companies are still expanding moderately, but most of them have stopped altogether and many have actually begun to close unprofitable stores.

In more than a few cases it has been reported that companies had fewer stores in operation at the end of 1931 than at the end of the preceding year, indicating the fact that the retrenchment policies have been in effect for some time.

Chain store executives are inclined to pay but little attention to the comparative sales reports of their companies from month to month and year to year as such. They recognized that the figures themselves were totally meaningless, even when considered in comparison with the number of locations being operated.

Of Highest Importance.

The general price trend of commodities is of highest importance in the case of the chain food store or chain restaurant, as is the general price range of materials in the cases of chain clothing and specialty companies. In other words, sales figures for chain store companies are meaningless in comparison with previous periods, unless the buying value of the particular dollar involved, and of the dollar generally, is taken into consideration.

Chain store leaders say that obviously they cannot show as large dollar profits in times of low prices as in times of high prices, but they contend that they have been directing their efforts towards improving the percentage of profit on each dollar of sale, a step which will not only tend to keep their earnings higher now, but place them in a position to get full benefit of a rise in prices when it comes.

STATE MINERAL CONFERENCE TO BE HELD FEB. 5

Pointing out that an industry with products and derivatives amounting to approximately $240,000,000 annually is well worthy of the attention and support of Illinois business men, the Illinois Chamber of Commerce is urging attendance at the mineral industries conference to be held at La Salle, Ill., on Feb. 5.

The meeting will have the three-fold purpose of urging a complete investigation into the composition and potential economic possibilities of all mineral and rock substances occurring in Illinois; of providing for the study of production and movements of mineral materials both into and out of the state and of all possible marketing opportunities.

"Some signs have appeared of an increasing investment demand for securities. Opposition groups in congress have shown a tendency to cooperate with the administration in its program of legislation to facilitate economic recovery.

"Encouragement has also been drawn from the greater stability in commodity markets."

At the same time the review calls attention to some serious problems that remain to be faced.

"Bank failures," it says, "are still numerous. Many local governments are experiencing great difficulty in meeting their current financial requirements. The real estate situation in numerous localities is unfavorable. General tax increases are inevitable. No substantial revival in construction is visible or in immediate prospect."

GUARANTY TRUST CO. FINDS IMPROVEMENT IN TRADE SENTIMENT

New York, Jan. 24.—(AP)—The Guaranty Trust company finds that a "perceptible improvement in business sentiment has appeared since the beginning of the year."

"Several factors appear to have aided in dispelling the atmosphere of extreme pessimism that existed at the end of 1931," states the Guaranty Survey published today. "The testimony of bankers before the finance committee of the senate on foreign loans helped greatly to clarify the financial outlook as related to conditions abroad.

"Foreign news, prior to the indefinite postponement of the Lausanne conference late this month, stimulated hope for an agreement between Great Britain and France concerning reparations and war debts.

"Some signs have appeared of an increasing investment demand for securities. Opposition groups in congress have shown a tendency to cooperate with the administration in its program of legislation to facilitate economic recovery.

GRAIN TRADERS SEE COMMODITY PRICE ADVANCE

Believe Gov't Relief Corp. Will Help.

tina and Australia are shipping at around the highest volume known, with indications that they will continue for a considerable period, which will result in importing countries getting large supplies at low prices.

Russian Shipments Drop.

Russian shipments have fallen off and soviet exports since Aug. 1 have been only 67,728,000 bu as compared with 72,440,000 bu the previous season.

World's stocks of wheat and flour increased 25,800,000 bu during December as compared with a year ago, and world's shipments for 28 weeks this season have been 335,800,000 bu of wheat and flour, out of an estimated total of 776,000,000 bu for the season. Wheat and flour supplies in the United States present a bearish situation and all indications point to liberal carryovers in leading producing countries. What Russia will do, however, is too uncertain to place too much confidence in.

A feature in the Chicago market was the heavy evening up in the open interest without any material change in the aggregate. The latter at the close of the week was 113,729,000 bu as compared with 115,939,000 bu a week ago. Sales of futures were 211,199,000 bu, compared with 94,913,000 bu the previous week, and 53,819,000 bu last year.

Closing prices on wheat and all grains showed declines for the week, net losses on wheat being 1¼@1⅝c, corn 1⅜@2c, oats ⅝@⅞c, and rye 1⅛@1¾c. March closed at 56c, May 58@58¼c, July 57⅝@57¾c, and September 59@59¼c. Prices for the week follow:

Corn Situation Unusual.

Cash handlers of corn, who usually depend upon large consuming orders from the east and southeast, have been disappointed this year. One of the largest cash interests explaining the situation, says that Virginia and West Virginia, and parts of the southeastern states, raised a larger corn crop than usual but have not been in the market for supplies, while in other years they have been large buyers. Ohio and Indiana had large corn crops, and Ohio has supplied the eastern trade, while Indiana has shipped corn into Illinois, a good deal of it coming to Chicago. Northern Wisconsin feeders who bought heavily a few weeks ago have been filled up, and the general feeding demand has been disappointing.

Industries have taken the bulk of the cash corn. Illinois farmers sold cash corn more freely the last two weeks, much of it coming to Chicago.

In the speculative situation, the trade has been disappointing, with the feeling in the main, bearish. Outside interest continues practically absent in future deliveries. Closing prices were around the bottom, with March 38c, May 40⅝@40½c, July 42@41⅞c and September 42¾c. Prices for the week follow:

Fair Interest in Oats.

Oat traders base their operations more on the action of wheat and corn than upon any other factor. Bulges bring out realizing sales and breaks result in a little new speculative buying. Cash interests, however, practically control the markets and at times were conspicuous in buying May against sales of July at ½c discount for the latter, which closed at 25c, with May 25⅝c. HOG PRODUCTS SELL WELL

Packers and cash handlers report a good trade in hams and side meats, particularly hams, with the former well sold up to their cure, consumption being larger than usual at this period owing to the low prices. Speculative trading in lard futures was mixed, the range of prices narrow, and the close 2½@12¼c lower for the week, July leading the break. Hogs were the lowest since 1899, with a belief that there will be ample supplies throughout the year. Prices follow:

Why pay more than Household's low rate?

The nationally known Household Loan Plan offers cash loans of $50 to $300 to husbands and wives at reasonable rates.

Household's rate on all loans above $100 is almost one-third lower than the maximum permitted by the small loan law. We voluntarily established this low rate in 1928 and our customers have benefited ever since. This rate remains the same until the loan is paid off. It does not increase as the unpaid balance decreases.

FOR EXAMPLE:
The average monthly cost of a $200 loan repaid in 20 equal monthly payments is $2.63. This is the lowest cost in Chicago.
